Metal From The Sky

The following were disclosed by the Raeford Police Department.

On August 13, Mack's Store in Edenborough Shopping Center made a complaint concerning a shoplifting incident. Carrie L. Shaw, Rt. 4, Box 328, Raeford, was arrested and charged with shoplifting two blouses at $11.88. She was also charged with stealing two blouses and three washcloths valued at $16.98 from Family Dollar Store.

The Hoke County Sheriff's Department reported the following.

In a larceny incident, Nancy Oxendine informed the Sheriff's Department that several class rings, total value $250, were stolen from her and her father on Tuesday morning August 10 at Route 1, Box 144A, Red Springs residence.

On August 11, Terry Caulder, Route #3, Box 1, Raeford, reported a breaking and entering.

August 13 found Roy Locklear, Route 1, Box 616E, Red Springs informing the department that two airplanes flew over his home and a piece of metal fell from the sky at the same time, striking his car. The metal in this damage to property report was turned over to an official of Pope AFB. Investigation is continuing.

WHAT ADVERTISERS KNOW ABOUT US

A charge card is a wonderful thing when you're buying. But it can get worrisome when it's time to pay.

Opening our monthly bill from the credit card company can be an awesome experience, especially when the computerized list of purchases fills two or three pages. My standard reaction is to stare at the bill in disbelief and ask, "How could we have bought so much?"

Now I know the answers to that question, thanks to a book on advertising I picked up the other day. Right there in chapter one, the writer listed a dozen reasons for my tendency to whip out the credit card so often. And, as I compared his analysis with my own reasons for buying, I had to admit he had me dead to rights.

He started by revealing a remarkable truth. Advertising is not designed primarily to make us want to buy things, but, rather, to give us reasons for buying what we already want to buy. In other words, most of us have lots of things we want to buy. But, before we will actually put down our money, we need to be able to justify our purchases. That's where advertising comes in. To help us find reasons for buying.

Here are some reasons for buying that will be familiar to you:

*Good price. This is why sales of all kinds have such magnetic appeal. It's hard to resist a bargain. Even if you don't need the item right away, it's easy to convince yourself you're gonna need it sooner or later, if the price is right.

*Limited availability. Do you remember the great toilet paper scare that swept the county a few years ago? A threatened paper shortage, which never actually materialized, sent people scurrying to the nearest market to buy up a supply of toilet paper. It was a strange sight, seeing the paper products shelves in our local grocery completely empty. It's not that people needed all that toilet paper. They bought it up because they thought it was going to be scarce.

*Popular trends. Occasionally, people part with their money simply because they get caught up in a popular fad. How else can you explain the fact that otherwise sane people will spend hard-earned cash for pet rocks and "designer" chocolates?

*Necessity. Obviously, we buy some things because we need them, or think we need them. That's why food stores keep going strong while other businesses falter. We might do without new cars, but nobody's going to stop eating. Not willingly, anyway.

*Obligation. You know, those perennial wedding, birthday, and graduation gifts.

*Prestige. The old "keeping up with the Joneses" syndrome. Self-image. Loads of cosmetics and different kinds of wearing apparel are bought to enhance the impression one hopes to make on others.

*Security. Smoke alarms, auto safety features, and insurance.

So there you have it. Some of the main reasons for running up that charge card balance. This information won't reduce your balance. But it might help you understand why it's high.

An interesting early type of "cigarette" was smoked by the Pima Indians of Arizona in ancient times. They stuffed tobacco into reeds and smoked that.

"JOAB" PARTY

Kids!: Be sure you don't forget the Summer Reading "JOAB" party to be held at the library Friday, August 20, at 2:30 p.m.

The ten books should have all been read by that time and registered on your chart. Joab foot prints should be all the way down the 'reading path' to make your chart complete. You will get to take your chart home to keep after the party. One of the main features at the party will be a puppet show for everyone to enjoy. This will be done by the members of the Regional Library Staff.

JOAB CLUBS

The youngsters who joined either the K-3 or 4-6 Joab reading club have just about finished with their craft projects and will have them on display so everyone can see them. Some from K-3 are already on display. These folks have been enjoying films, stories, and crafts all summer.

Background Scripture: Acts 16:1-5; 1 Corinthians 4:14-21; 16:10, 11; Thessalonians 3:1-10; 2 Timothy 3:1-7.
Devotional Reading: 1 Timothy 6:11-16.

For every Apostle like Paul there needs to be a troubleshooter like Timothy. Although the New Testament has little to say about Timothy's work for Christ, it is nevertheless apparent that very often Paul's success as an apostle depended upon the low-key efforts of the associate whom he called "my beloved and faithful child in the Lord" (1 Cor. 4:17). Timothy's contribution to the Gospel may have been relatively quiet and unobtrusive, but it was a vital contribution nonetheless.

It must be acknowledged that, although Paul was an extremely effective Apostle for Christ, he was not always the most unifying force in early Christianity. His fiery zeal, so effective with some people, was just as much a barrier for other people. Outspoken, often blunt and adamant in his pronouncements to people, the explosive Paul sometimes had severe problems with some of the churches.

Nowhere is this more evident than in his relationships with the congregation at Corinth. His letters to this church clearly indicate that his oversight was strongly rejected by some of the Corinthian Christians. "Therefore I sent to you Timothy, my beloved and faithful child in the Lord" (1 Cor. 4). To bridge the gap between Paul and his detractors in Corinth there was needed someone who could calmly and quietly unify the group. Timothy apparently was the man to whom Paul turned for this vital ministry.

In Thessalonians 3:1 we find another occasion when Paul calls upon Timothy to perform a valuable mission. Deeply concerned about the church at Thessalonica, Paul, unable to leave what he is doing in Athens, sends Timothy in his stead "to establish you in your faith and to exhort you, that no one be moved by these afflictions." Paul could be confident because he knew he could depend upon Timothy.

Even in his first mission with Paul, Timothy's work was that of a troubleshooter. Acts 16 tells us that Paul was to carry to the various churches the controversial decisions by the Christian leaders in Jerusalem. On the recommendation of Christian leaders in Lystra and Iconium, Paul chose Timothy for this delicate and vital work. No wonder he continued in his letters to refer to Timothy in terms of highest praise and affection: "Timothy, our brother and God's servant in the gospel of Christ" (1 Thess. 3:1).

Few of us are cut out to be a Paul for Christ, but there are many of us whom God can use, as he did Timothy, as a troubleshooter for the sake of the Gospel of Christ, bringing people together and overcoming factions and rifts in the life of the church. We need not have the eloquence of Paul, if we share the loving care of Timothy.

HELP!!

Friday ended our help from the CETA programs and we are really going to have to do some juggling to keep all our library house. Being short handed we have already cut out Sunday afternoons and Thursday evening hours.

School will be starting soon and we feel as always there will be a lot of help needed with reports, etc. With trying to keep the Bookmobile on the road, (takes two people) that only leaves two in the library to help the patrons; one at the desk the other helping with reports. That leaves the phone to be answered the general work of getting books back on the shelves, the ordering of special books plus cataloging new books, story hours, film showings in and out of the library, Rest Home services, etc.; so many things that may get left undone without some kind of help.

We will sorely miss Danny Roberts, Jena Berry, and Murtle McGregor; all who's jobs ended last Friday. These folks worked real hard to help keep our library clean and running efficiently. -- Seems sick days and vacation time will have to be planned for weekends, 'one day at a time.'
