Hint: Never boil water in an open pan. Water will come to a boil faster and use less energy in a kettle or covered pan.

The pineapple is a most exotic fruit. For one brief period during its long life cycle, a pineapple plant puts on a floral display as dazzling as an orchid.

This fruit requires more land preparation than almost any other crop. It takes almost two years to produce its first crop and then only gives you one fruit per plant.

That plant producers is only one more workable marketable crop before it has to be knocked down and new plants started.

Unlike bananas, pineapples do not continue to ripen after they've been picked, which means they must be left on the plant until they're fully ripe and have reached maximum sweetness.

Shell color is no indication of whether or not that magic moment has arrived. Once picked the pineapple has only about three weeks before their quality starts to slip. Try a pineapple that has been flown into your area.

A bit more expensive but a lot more flavor. Worth a try.

Sunday School Lesson

Background Scripture: Genesis 15.
Devotional Reading: Hebrews 6:13-20.
The Time: Any Sunday morning.
The Place: Your Church.
The Occasion: The Sunday morning worship service.

The time has come in the service for the Pastor's announcements. But before he can begin to read from the worship bulletin, a man stands up a few pews in front of you and in a quiet tone that nevertheless reaches the far corners of the sanctuary: "I'd like to share with you this morning a most wonderful experience that happened to me a few days ago. I had a vision in which God called me by name and said..."

We don't have to carry the little story any further for its sheer absurdity to become quiet evident: it has probably never happened in your church and it is never likely to do so. For one thing, it would seem that people don't have that kind of experience any more and, for another, if they do, they know better than to tell of them in church.

Yet, none of us think it particularly surprising that Genesis 15 begins with this declaration: "the Lord came to Abram in a vision..." In fact, the whole story of Abram/Abraham is the direct result of his mystical revelations from God. Although Abram was at an age -- the retirement years -- when most people have settled into a definite pattern (read "rut," if you like), the visionary messages which Abram received from God changed both his name and the whole course of his life, not to mention the world.

Most of us have been raised in a culture which, despite our religion or because of it, has managed to indoctrinate us into rejecting anything visionary or mystical. We are dutifully respectful of the role visions played in the Bible, but we assume that both the growth of intellect and reason have made the mystical obsolete at the very least. It is interesting and ironic, therefore, that today various scientists and others are telling us that our minds comprise two very different faculties: reason and intuition. The left side of the brain is the reasoning faculty, whereas the right side of the brain is much more intuitive ("mystical" some would say). We have too much relied upon the left side of our brain. The well-balanced person will use both kinds of faculties.

In Genesis 15 we find Abram doing just that. Seeing and hearing God in a vision, he attempts to deal with it in a reasonable way: "But Abram said, 'O Lord God, what wilt thou give me, for I continue you childless...?' " Abram's life was transformed because in responding to God he used both his reason and his intuitive faculties. If you would hear God's voice, you must do no less.

August Rains An Inch Shy

The total for the same month a year ago was 4.85 inches and ended two Augusts of drought -- 1.4 inches in 1980, and 1.9 inches in 1979.
