

Leslies, McKoys Hold Reunion

The reunion of the Leslie and McKoy families was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Evangelist and Mrs. Hosia McAllister in Robin Heights.

Out-of-town guests were Roy (Billy) Hendon, Roy Lee Hendon (Pappy Joe), Carolyn and Sam Canran of Newark, N.J., John Leslie, Jr., Gorley Carpenter, Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Jim McKoy and daughter, of Charlotte, Miss Brendilee Leslie was unable to come because of her duty as a nurse but called from San Antonio, Tex., as the reunion was underway. She said it seemed as though she were there with the others.

In the background she could hear talking and laughter sounding as though the members of the families were having a good time. She also said she missed the people and the reunion.

Bounds Memory Honored Sept. 12

The late Lawrence Bounds was honored September 12 by the Hoke Reading/Literacy Council for his services to the program to help illiterate people in Hoke County read and write.

Bounds died in August. The council later adopted a resolution pledging Bound's "dreams for a literate Hoke County shall be continued..."

A framed copy of the resolution was presented to Joyce Bounds, his widow, at a ceremony at the Hoke County Library on September 12, which had been designated Literacy Sunday, and this was part of Literacy Weekend. Activities in observance of the weekend had been held September 11 at Edenborough Shopping Center.

The framed copy of the resolution, signed by the members of the council, was presented by Mrs. Ruth Ansley, the council's chairman.

The other members are Deborah Purcell, secretary; and John D. McAllister, Gloria G. Williams, Mina H. Townsend, Huell Maynor, Cleo Bratcher, Jr., Elga Langdon, Eloise Campbell, Nellie F. Flowers, Harold L. Gillis, and Ken Wither- spoon.

The council has received donations sent as memorials to Bounds.

The text of the resolution follows.

IN MEMORY OF LAWRENCE BOUNDS NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds through thought and action desired that Hoke County be a quality place to live and work, and

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds recognized that basic literacy skills could aid in the provision of a better society, and

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds chose to help provide basic literacy skills through membership in a local, state and national literacy organization, and

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds translated his belief into action by voluntarily serving on Hoke Reading/Literacy Council's Board of Directors from July 1, 1981 until his death, and

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds faithfully attended literacy meetings and served as chairman of the Recruiting and Training Committee and accepted his full share of responsibility as a board member, and

WHEREAS, Lawrence Bounds inspired others to become active in literacy work as students, tutors, leaders and supporters, and

WHEREAS, Hoke Reading/Literacy is stronger for having been blessed with his presence:

THEREFORE WE, the active board members of Hoke/Reading Literacy Council do hereby resolve that Lawrence Bounds dreams for a literate Hoke County shall be continued and, further RESOLVE, that a copy of this resolution shall become a part of the official record of Hoke Reading/Literacy Council and that a copy be given to Mrs. Joyce Bounds on September 12, 1982.

KITCHEN FULL OF TOYS

When you're in the kitchen, the chances are pretty good that your children are going to be under your feet. So rather than curse the situation, you should capitalize on it.

After all, your kitchen is well-stocked with things that can be both fun and educational for young children.

If you can spare the space, let your children have a bottom cupboard or drawer all their own. Fill it with old pans, wooden bowls and spoons, plastic containers and jar lids.

Your children will imitate your actions as you stir, mix, roll out dough or pour water from one container to another.

In addition, your kitchen is full of no-cost, non-breakable materials for children to play with, including empty cereal boxes, egg cartons and coffee cans.

If you haven't realized this, your child probably has. So instead of fighting the situation, enjoy it. If you supply the materials, the changes are pretty good your children will come up with ways to play with them.

TIPS FOR TODDLER'S BED-TIME ROUTINE

When children reach two years of age, life with them may become more difficult. For that's the age when they decide to try out their independence. And one time of day that may really be trying for parents is bedtime.

To make this time go a little smoother, try this. Help your child develop and recognize a definite routine for ending the day.

This routine should be brief. But it should consist of the child's play being tapered down -- for example, the bath, putting on pajamas and then some rocking or reading from a book -- and then into bed. The child may want to prolong these steps. Two-year-olds are so curious that they may want to keep on playing and exploring. But you'll need to be firm about bedtime.

Even if the toddler cries out or wants to get in bed with you, be consistent about the child's staying in his or her own bed and going to sleep. This bedtime routine will help make it possible for both the parent and child to get the rest needed for the next day's activities.

Choir Pageant King, Queen Crowned

The Pre-Junior Choir of Freedom Chapel AME Zion Church celebrated its 12th anniversary on September 18 and 19.

On Saturday night, Pamela Cagle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cagle, Jr., and great-grand daughter of Mrs. Fannie Powell, and Anthony Powell, grandson of Mrs. Fannie Powell and Mr. and Mrs. L.C. Cunningham, were crowned King and Queen during the choir's annual pageant. On Sunday afternoon the choir was in concert.

The other contestants were: Ida M. Afford, Angela Harris, Serna McRae, Terry Purcell, Anthony Ray, and Robert Gibson.

The Rev. James L. Glenn is the pastor.
