200 Jobs Cut At Ft. Bragg

Some 200 temporary civil service employees at Fort Bragg lost their jobs at the end of September as the installation undertakes action to meet its civilian employee end-strength as required by U.S. Army Forces Command.

Notices were sent to all of the affected jobholders, most of whom occupy temporary clerical, trade and crafts positions.

Under the terms of local federal hiring provisions, personnel working under a temporary employment agreement are subject to termination at any time, according to civilian personnel officials.

The hiring agency is required to give seven calendar days advance notice that a temporary job is being terminated.

Many of the almost 200 employees were already scheduled to be terminated at the close of the 1982 Fiscal Year, as stated in the original terms of their employment.

The effective date of this termination to meet end-strength was September 29.

Beginning October 1, Fort Bragg will have a Forces Command authorization for approximately 65 temporary appropriated fund positions, according to the spokesman. These positions will probably include a number of the people affected by the current cutback.

The Fort Bragg commander has the discretion to hire temporary employees within prescribed limitations, to meet the needs of the installation, as they arise.

The total manpower authorization for Forces Command activities at Fort Bragg, including temporary and permanent positions, amounts to roughly 2,800 civil service employees.
