Sunday School Lesson

Background Scripture:
Joshua 3 through 4
Devotional Reading:
Joshua 4:19-24.

Organized religions are constantly in danger of falling into one of two dangerous extremes. One of these is to dwell in the past and the other is to forget the past.

Perhaps this is the reason that the musical show, Fiddler on the Roof, has always had so much appeal to me. Apart from being most entertaining, each time I see it I am reminded that life is dependent both upon keeping tradition and breaking it. Somehow we must keep a creative tension between forgetting our traditions and keeping them.

Perhaps this is evident in the story recorded for us in Joshua 3 and 4. Having safely crossed the Jordan, God commands the people through Joshua to create a memorial with 12 stones. One gets the impression that perhaps these stones were still visible when the Book of Joshua was written. At any rate, the 12 stones were part of Israel's tradition.

Yet, the point of the story is not that the stones were to be honored, but that the stones were to point to something else: the safe passage over the river Jordan by the help of God. "When your children ask in time to come, 'What do those stones mean to you?' Then you shall tell them what the waters of the Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord...So these stones shall be to the people of Israel a memorial forever" (4:7).

It is typical of human nature to in time venerate the symbol, rather than what for which the symbol stands. When that happens, our tradition has become as empty - and often even harmful - as that of the scribes and pharisees which Jesus condemned. God can continue to speak to us through traditions and symbols, but when these become a substitute for God, they lose their meaning and their reason for being.

If we want to keep our traditions alive as a means through which God can speak to us and future generations, then it is extremely important for us to teach each generation the meaning behind them. All too often we simply pass on the symbols and traditions without making sure that they are still alive. And perhaps the reason that they do not live for our children and youth is that they no longer live for us. If we have allowed our traditions to become meaningless rituals that we practice by rote and without understanding, how can we expect that they will mean something to the younger generations?

It is also true that there comes a time when the old traditions no longer are channels of God's revelation. Then it is that, instead of clinging to the stones, we must find new ways by which God is able to speak to us.

Blood Pressure Clinic To Be Held Here Sat.

Blood Pressure Screening Clinics will be held Saturday, November 6, 1982 at the Edenborough Pharmacy, Hoke County Public Library, and all County Fire Stations from 10:00-12:00 a.m. and 2:00-4:00 p.m.

The Clinics are being sponsored by the Hoke County Heart Association, and will be staffed by local volunteers. All residents are urged to visit a clinic and have their blood pressures checked for free.

UN Day Celebrated With International Luncheon Dishes

Hoke County Extension Homemakers celebrated United Nations Day by having a covered dish luncheon of international foods.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrix of the Mildousen Extension Homemakers Club who is County International Chairman presided.

Former Hoke County Extension Homemakers and former delegates were recognized.

Over a period of 30 years, homemakers have visited the United Nations.

Three international persons were guests: Mrs. H.N.G. Balfour from Cambridge, England, Mrs. Gretha Odom from Denmark and Mrs. Edith Avant from Germany.

The assembly room of the Lester Building was beautifully decorated with items from foreign countries.
