Third Number Calls Nixed By January 10

Effective January 10, 1983, Carolina Telephone customers will not be able to bill a long distance telephone call to a third number from a pay station unless someone at the third number authorizes it.

T.K. McLaughlin, general operator services manager with Carolina Telephone, said, "This new policy will protect customers from being billed for calls they do not authorize."

"It also will save the company, and ultimately all customers, costs resulting from erroneously or fraudulently billed calls. We estimate that about $500,000 in fraudulent third number billings will be made this year from telephones in the Carolina Telephone area," McLaughlin said.

Beginning January 10, customers making long distance calls from pay stations will be able to call collect, pay for the call with coins, use a telephone Calling Card, which permits customers to charge their long distance calls to their homes or office numbers, or bill the call to a third telephone provided acceptance is obtained from the third number.

Individuals or businesses may obtain Calling Cards at no charge by visiting their local Phone Shop or calling the business office.

During November and December, to prepare customers for the coming new policy, operators will inform customers making third number calls that acceptance of charges will be required beginning Jan. 10.
