Miles S. Rothman,

SEEKING RELIEF -- Owners of the new concrete manufacturing plant under construction off of Stewart Street are seeking relief from the Raeford City Council for sewer bills.

Sewer Relief Sought

Rex Carpenter also told the council that the new plant his firm is constructing off of Stewart Street will not put production waste products into the sewer system.

We want to treat all manufacturing companies fairly," Councilman Bob Gentry said.

The overall effect of the move would have to be studied before the council should take action, Gentry said.

If the requests are granted, every industry in Raeford would be seeking similar relief, Matthews said.

Faberge can prove that they place only 10,000 gallons of the 80,000 gallons of water they use back in the sewer system, Matthews said.

"They asked for relief, and it was denied," he added.

The House of Raeford has similar claims, Matthews said.

The council is expected to take action on the matter during the January 10 meeting.

Meter Running

In a related matter, Matthews noted that the city sewer plant is coming close to meeting federal and state discharge guidelines, and that all but one industry are meeting pre-treatment standards.

Recently Faberge completed work on its new pre-treatment facility and is now meeting the discharge guidelines, Matthews

However, the motor is still ticking on the House of Raeford, he added.

The turkey processing firm has accumulated fines of more than $25,000 for failing to comply with pre-treatment standards, the city manager said.

Council members have given the House of Raeford until January 1, to meet the compliance standards or the accumulated fines will be assessed

The fines are being charged at $5,000 per month, but if the turkey plant takes steps to correct the problem, then the assessments could be forgiven. If Raeford does not meet its discharge requirements into Rockfish Creek, the state could also fine the city up to $10,000 per

That fine would also be passed on to the House of Raeford, city officials have said.

"The city treatment plant is getting closer, but the House of Raeford can't be in compliance by January," Mayor John K. McNeill

Street Plan Started

In another matter, the council commissioned a Lumberton engineering firm to conduct a survey of the city's streets, curbs, gutters and sidewalks and to develop a three-year improvement

The plan would put the city in a position to qualify for new federal street improvement programs now being considered by the U.S. Congress, Koonce, Noble and Associates Inc. representative Skip Green said.

The city can also use the plan in applying state funds provided through the Powell Bill, Green

Fees for the engineering work will be taken out of federal or state repair money, Green added.

The council also took action on these matters during the regular monthly meeting.

•Reaffirmed the spending of $10,000 in revenue sharing funds to purchase a van for the county Parks and Recreation Department. The van will be used to provide services for senior citizens and was budgeted by the city two years ago, Recreation Department spokesman Walter Blue said.

·Approved for entry into the meeting's minutes a history of volunteer fire fighting in the county. The history was compiled by Robert Gathin for Fire Prevention Week and will be preserved with the city records.

· OK'd community projects proposed by Scouts Tom and Jim McFadyen. The projects will involve improving city streets signs and establishing a "Welcome to Raeford" sign on N.C. 211.

the Nickelodian, all-children's programming.

Railey told the city officials that adding a single channel carries a "tremendous expense" -- about $232,000 for microwave equipment alone. He also said that a problem for adding exists with the Federal Communications Commission regulation requiring a cable TV system to carry some specific program channels, based on the commercial television stations serving a community's area. Raeford he pointed out, is within range of at stations. Railey said. however, efforts would be made to work out a way to resolve the

Another question regarding duplication of programs con-cerned, two educational channels. Railey replied that one institution could be approached about withdrawal but that dropping an educational channel would be very

Regarding corrections, he said one problem has been cleared by having one employee to receive the subscribers' telephone calls at the office while the other was at lunch. Formerly, one complaint was both employees took lunch at the same

He also said after-hours calls at night from subscribers needing repair service (when the cable TV picture went off, for example) are supposed to be checked, and that the company has two service numbers for subscribers to call.

Matthews suggested that the company run notices in the newspaper advising subscribers of what number to call between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., and what to call after 5 p.m. when they experience technical difficulties.

Raeford was represented at the meeting by Mayor Pro Tem Graham Clark, City Attorney Palmer Willcox, and Assistant City Manager and Public Works Director Bill Sellars, in addition to Matthews.
