PSU Sociology Students Doing Field Work Here

Eighteen Pembroke State University sociology students have been doing field work in the six counties surrounding the school during the past several weeks.

Joy Warren of Raeford and Jennie McCormick of Fairmont are doing their studies in Hoke County.

Warren is working at the Hoke County Department of Social Services, and Young is spending time at the Sandhills Youth Center.

The students mix their field work with class time. Field work cannot exceed 150 hours per semester.

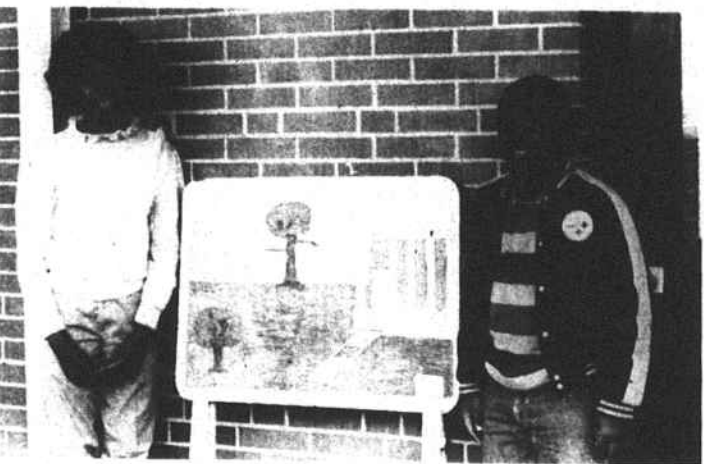

They agree the practical experience they gain by "being where it is happening" is invaluable.
