Statewide Dental Contest Launched

The first statewide dental health contest with a $500 cash award to the winning school, will highlight North Carolina's 1983 Children's Dental Health Month in February. "Let's Get Dental" is the theme for the contest.

It is being sponsored by the N.C. Dental Society, the Dental Health Section of the State Division of Health Services and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction to make young people aware of the importance of good oral health.

According to Dr. Bill Quarles, Statewide Chairman for 1983 Children's Dental Health Month, school principals have been asked to decide if their schools will participate in the contest.

"Awards will be determined based on the number of points a school earns by completing specific activities prepared by the planning committee throughout the month of February," Dr. Quarles said. "Points will be awarded to the school for such activities as having a dental display in the school library, holding a non-sweet snack day or conducting PTA programs related to dental health."

Dr. Quarles said, "classroom teachers can add to their schools' point total by scheduling dental health activities, such as conducting a fluoride mouthrinse program or asking a dentist to visit and talk to students, as part of their classroom curriculum."

Principals may add points to their schools' overall score by actively participating. Superintendents and administrators can also give a boost to the winning school's score by participating.

First prize for the winning school will be a state dental health trophy and cash award of $500 with district winners receiving a $100 prize. The cash prizes are being offered by the N.C. Dental Society and its local affiliates.

"We're asking individual dentists and local dental societies to urge schools in their area to participate and to offer their assistance with contest activities," Dr. Quarles said. "We want our young people to recognize the importance of good dental health care."

For more information on the contest and ways that schools and dental offices can participate, contact Kim Woodall at the Hoke Health Department at 875-3717.
