

DROP AREA: This open area adjacent to the Raeford Airport is where parachuters from all over the world come to make jumps and compete. The land is owned by Gene Paul Thacker.

Airport Unsettled

pointed to study the airport. During a recent landing at the airport, the plane had to pull up go around because parachutists were jumping very close to the runway Thacker claims this incident was the pilot's fault.

Anyone flying into the airport should know there is parachuting going on. It is listed on the flight maps, and the FAA Flight Service in Fayetteville also gives that information. Thacker told the city council last week.

"This incident happened, in my opinion, because the pilot did not try to contact anybody," Thacker

Thacker also claims that he hears about these incidents secondhand

'No one contacts me about these incidents themselves, I have to hear them from somebody

Despite Thacker's opposition to the radio and the fact that one is not required to be run by the FAA, the city council will probably amend Thacker's lease to include the monitoring of an Unicom at the airport, Ron Matthews said.

Thacker has already agreed to run the radio if the city council purchases it, however other recommendations that the committee may suggest might get some opposition, he said.

"I am an outspoken man, and if I believe in something I will speak out for or against it," Thacker

The airport committee, which will meet again later this month, may recommend that Thacker's jump school's landing zone be moved at least one-half mile from its present site.

Thacker said he would wait until such a recommendation has been officially made before commenting Motley spent over 11 years in that position before moving on to become the Hoke County ABC Of-

At the Board of Governor's meeting last week, Motley's years of service and contributions to the law enforcement occupation were recognized and honored, Barring-

Hoke Grand Jury Indicts Woman On Murder Charge

A Fort Bragg woman was in-dicted Monday by a Hoke County Grand Jury on charges that she stabbed her stepfather to death.

Victoria S. Burnette, 22, who was indicted Monday for second degree murder for the slaying of her stepfather, Roger Keith Shannon, also received a reduction of bond last Friday in Hoke County District Court.

District Court Judge Joseph Dupree agreed to reduce the bond from $50,000 to $40,000, but as of press time, Burnette was still confined to the Cumberland County

Burnette has been confined in Cumberland County because Hoke County does not have jail facilities for women.

In an unrelated incident in district court last week, Thaddeus E. Jones was found guilty on two counts of worthless checks (fourth or subsequent offense) and one count of assualt and inflicting serious injury.

Judge Dupree ordered Jones to be confined in the Hoke County Jail for no less than 12 months and no more than 12 months on the charge of assault.

In the worthless check charges, Judge Dupree ordered that Jones be confined for 30 days. Jones gave notice of appeal in both cases.

In other action, Judge Dupree handed down these judgements.

Pound Site Selected

presented the tape to the commit-This was done so that the committee members would not have an excuse for not seeing the three areas before making a final decision, McGinnis said.

McGinnis also videotaped a shelter in Laurinburg to help the committee decide what type of facility to recommend.

At Wednesday night meeting, committee members viewed the tape of the shelter and came up with a recommendation for one proposed for Hoke County.

According to the recommenda-tions, the building would be 1,924 square feet and would include; 20 dog runs, an office facility, internal parking for vehicles, two half baths, a treatment room for a veterinarian's use, a quarantine room for dogs, a facility for cats with seperate cubby holes and a room just for puppies and preg-

Members considered other areas and other facilities before coming to their final decision, McGinnis which is jointly operated by the city and the county, was one of the choices the committee mulled over, but it was the least favored of the three choices, the chairman said.

"The committee was very vocal in their opposition to the landfill," McGinnis said.

The stigma attached to the land-fill as a "dump," in the commit-tee's opinion, would discourage persons wanting to go to the site to look for an animal, McGinnis said.

Although the committee oppos-ed the landfill, City Manager Ron Matthews felt it was the ideal location from an "administrative standpoint." Using the landfill would be the most cost-efficient because the shelter and the landfill operation could share facilities, Matthews

"As far as the actual site, I see no problem with either one, but I believe the landfill has administrative advantages that the other property doesn't have," Matthews said.

According to McGinnis, the committee is not going to meet again until Monday night's commission meeting.
"We were appointed to come up with a site and a plan, and we've done that," McGinnis said.

The decision is now being placed in the hands of the county commissioners, Ginnis added.

Local National Guardsmen Take M-1 Tank Training

On March 14, 31 newly enlisted North Carolina Army National Guardsmen will depart for Fort Knox, Kentucky for Basic Training and Advanced Individual Training as tank crewmen on the new M-1 Abrams Tank.

The new soldiers are assigned to the Southern Pines, Sanford, Albemarle, Red Springs and Laurinburg units of the 2-252d Armor Battalion headquartered in Raeford.

The North Carolina Army National Guard was notified in 1982 of the assignment to this national guard battalion of 63 of the new $1.8 million tanks.

The M-1, which is the most modern of any U.S. armored fighting vehicle, is noted for its survivability, improved firepower, ease of maintainability, and increased mobility and contains new highly sophisticated weapon systems.

Because of the skills required to operate and maintain the M-1, qualified men from southeastern North Carolina were sought to fill the new vacancies created by the need for expertise in these new military skills.

The buddy platoon will undergo approximately 14 weeks of combined Basic Training and Advanced Individual Training and will graduate as qualified tank crewmen for the M-1
