For Soup, It's Vegetables

If the students of Louise Barnwell's class practice what they preach, they are indeed healthy people.

Evidence of their belief was obvious as the class presented an assembly program to the faculty, parents and students of West Hoke School.

As Juanita Lowery announced their names, each student portraying the various vegetables and two basic seasonings, marched across the stage.

Passing in review, under close scrutiny were: Henry Campbell, Nakia McLaughlin, James Hurst, Bentley Lowery, Jeffrey Purcell,

Tachia Johnson, Maria Latkowski, Kristina Ellington and Juanita Lowery joined together in their presentation of "Chicken Soup With Rice."

Soup is not soup and has no nutritional value with just a mineral as just a basic ingredient.

How well the traveler was aware of this as he Bryan Monroe, so cunningly convinced a complete household that a bit of meat and vegetables would make "Stone Soup" a delicious, as well as a nutritious meal.

After adding a little of this and a little of that, constant stirring and slow cooking, the traveler served his stone soup.

The tasters agreed that this soup indeed was a taster's choice.

Assisted by Betty Hendrix, the characters in the old folk tale, "Stone Soup" included: Julie Jordan, Bryan Monroe, Dione Henderson, Lonnette Leggett, Tasha Roman, Vincent Purcell, Felicia Johnson, Vincent Purcell, Kristyn Jackson, Tasha Roman and Tom Wright.
