Former Hoke Student Presents Dental Paper

Paula McLean, now a senior at the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics, presented to the American Association for Dental Research a paper based on work she did as a research apprentice at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

McLean and Dr. James Bawden, Alumni Distinguished Professor of Pedodontics, are co-authors of a study dealing with the incorporation of fluoride into developing teeth.

McLean was a participant in a high school research apprentice program this summer in which she completed an original project relating to the fluoride study. Since summer she has continued working with Bawden, assisting in other phases of the project.

Bawden said McLean gave the paper because her summer project was so successful. "It has a lot of clinical implications," he said.

"Fluoride Uptake at Various Stages of Enamel Development," is the title of the paper McLean delivered to the gathering of dental researchers when they met March 17-20 in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The 18-year-old student has had hands-on laboratory experience and has attended research seminars and career-oriented programs in Chapel Hill and while in Cincinnati.

The original summer program was funded by the Federal Department of Health and Human Resources.

Bawden said he felt it was unusual for a high school student to address a national group of dental health scientists.

"We're very pleased when our (UNC-CH) dental students can give papers," Bawden said. "I don't think a high school student has ever done this before."

McLean is a former Hoke County High School student but was selected to attend NCSSM in Durham, NC at the beginning of her junior year.

McLean is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Atlas Lewis of Red Springs. Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Black and her paternal grandparent is Mrs. Eliza M. Mack, all of Red Springs.
