Local 4-H'er Returns From Washington Trip

Ronda Tatum of Raeford has returned from Washington, D.C., after attending Citizenship-Washington Focus, which was a week-long experience in citizenship and leadership training at the National 4-H Center.

Ronda was one of 25 4-H members from North Carolina and six states participating.

The program is designed to help young people understand the structure and function of our system of government, the heritage of our country and the importance of active participation as citizens.

Using the nation's capital as a "classroom," the program included a day on Capitol Hill to meet with members of Congress and see government in action. She met Senator Helms and Congressman Hefner.

Field trips to historical and cultural sites as well as to federal agencies and community organizations were among the most inform-ative and exciting parts of the week, according to Ronda. They included a trip to the White House,

Mount Vernon, navy yard, and the Burn Brea Dinner Theater.

In workshop sessions at the National 4-H Center, the young people discussed contemporary issues and concerns, and ways in which skills and knowledge gained during the week could be applied to the 4-H program here.

One experience was being able to share ideas with other 4-H members from across the country. Information was traded on lifestyles, and the way 4-H is involved in lives.

Citizenship-Washington Focus is conducted by National 4-H Council in support of the 4-H program of the Cooperative Extension Service of the state land-grant universities and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Ronda was selected to attend on the basis of her involvement in 4-H and her achievements and will to become a better person.

More information on 4-H can be obtained by writing or calling Alice Pettitt, 4-H agent at 875-2162.

Grant Aids St. Andrews Press

St. Andrews Presbyterian Col-lege's St. Andrews Press has received a $10,000 gift from Oregon poet Ethel Fortner, college officals announced recently. It is the largest contribution ever made to the Press.

The funds will be used to convert a classroom into the Fortner Press and Review Room, which will house an office for the Press director, a work area for the reading and editing of material, and a business office

In addition to the initial gift Mrs. Fortner has agreed to provide ongoing financial support to St. Andrews Press in the form of quarterly cash installments. Annually, these contributions are expected to equal or surpass current levels of support given by the N.C. Arts Council, thus strengthening the Press's ability to publish the works of deserving authors.

"These are hard times for the small presses," said Jack Roper, director of St. Andrews Press. "It's sad to think there's going to come a day when there are few outlets for poetry in the Southeast, much less in North Carolina. We're going to be one of those outlets.

St. Andrews Press publishes books of poetry; essays and fiction by both regional and national writers. It also publishes "St. An-drews Review," the much acclaimed magazine of the arts humanities.

Mrs. Fortner, a frequent participant in the St. Andrews Writer's Forum, is the author of "A Sud-den Clarity," "Clouds and Keepings" and "Nervous on the Curves."
