

Children's books arrive at Hoke County Library

By Elizabeth Burgess
Hoke County Librarian

Our new children's books have arrived. We are excited, and we hope our young readers will share our enthusiasm.

Betsy McNeill and Louise McDiarmid are working hard to get them ready for the shelves.

The books are a gift from Jo Sinclair Northrop, and they were given to the library in memory of her parents. We thank Mrs. Northrop for her generous contribution to the Hoke County Public Library. I know the children will enjoy them for many years.

The library wishes to thank teachers from J.W. McLaughlin Elementary School for the Halloween art display in the library.

Students from the classes of Janice Worthy, Mary Bounds, Ann Shannon and Gertie Wright are certainly helping to make the library come alive with the spirit of Halloween. We invite young artists from all the schools to give the library art work for display. We love to have the opportunity to share art from the schools with the community.

The library has had several school classes to tour the library recently. We enjoy having the young people in the library. Please call the library to arrange a tour.

The library is in the process of having installed a new phone system. This means that our Dial-a-Story is just around the corner. As soon as the new system is installed, we will advertise the beginning of the Dial-a-Story programs.

Library News

The library is looking forward to having the children of Hoke County enjoy being able to call the library and hear a good story or tale right in their own home.

The library thanks Harriet McDonald for the display in the foyer concerning Down's Syndrome.

October is National Down's Syndrome month. Harriet put together many interesting and informative booklets, pamphlets, and photographs describing Down's Syndrome.

The library patrons have gained insight into the different aspects of a child with Down's Syndrome.

These new books were received this week by the Hoke County Public Library, a member of the Sandhill Regional Library System.

They are available at Hoke County Public and Bookmobile in Raeford.

Raeford native is honored by Wake Forest University

A native of Raeford, who is a photographer, author and sculptor, received the distinguished service citation from the alumni association of Wake Forest University at a homecoming banquet October 26.

The award went to Arthur D. Gore Jr., who now lives in Morrison, Colorado, a suburb of Denver, where he has a photography studio.

Hundreds of his works are displayed in colleges, schools, hospitals and churches. Several of his pieces of sculpture are on display in high schools and churches in the Denver area.

Gore's book, titled "Speak Softly to the Echoes," tells of his growing up in Hoke County and is illustrated with his color photographs. He also is the author of "Images of Yesterday," and has had numerous poems published. He has won first place in art shows and has been featured in "Art Gore Specials" on several Denver television stations. Last year he was featured in a half-hour documentary which was carried in 270 public information TV stations.

The Governor of Colorado proclaimed September 1, 1983, as "Art Gore Day" for the state in connection with "Art Gore Week," which was celebrated in Morrison.

Gore was one of three people who received distinguished service citations which were awarded for service to their professions, their communities and their Alma Mater.

The other recipients were Dr. William R. Cowan of Rockville, Maryland, retired director of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, and James Edward Peters of Salem, Virginia, who has set a world record (20,000 people) in signing donors for the Eye Bank Association of America.

Gore's citation read, in part, "The goal of Wake Forest-- or any university-- is to create in her students the desire to seek truth and to create beauty. Art Gore of the Class of 1949 exemplifies his Alma Mater's contribution to the intellect and the soul. Through his artistry as a photographer and a poet, he has captured and created beauty, and has won the acclaim of critics and the American public alike..."

Eagles in flight
These two young Raeford men recently received the rank of Eagle Scout at a special presentation ceremony. James Guy (right) was challenged with the Eagle charge by Julian King and Mac Langdon (left) was charged by Raz Autry. James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Guy and Mac is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Langdon.

Hoke youths named Eagles

Recently, two young men of the county were awarded the highest honor available to a Boy Scout, the rank of Eagle Scout.

James Guy and Mac Langdon were awarded their badges during a special Eagle Ceremony at Raeford's First Baptist Church on October 7.

For his Eagle project, Mac Langdon acquired a list of 20 names from the Raeford Rest Home and set up a visitation list of volunteers from the Raeford Baptist Church.

James Guy's Eagle project was to collect old outdated drugs from the Raeford community and turn them in for disposal.

Pharmacist Sprite Barbe disposed of the old drugs.

Guy also passed out brochures and other information to persons in town alerting them to poisons and first aid treatment.

Faircloth assigned to Ft. Knox duty

Army Sgt. James S. Faircloth Jr., son of James S. and Ettie Faircloth of Rural Route 3, Raeford, has arrived for duty at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

The sergeant is a 1976 graduate of Hoke County High School.

Deaths & Funerals

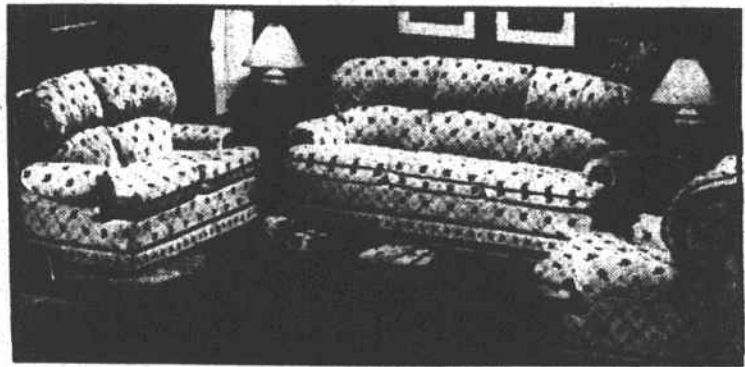

Mary Campbell Burns
Former Raeford resident Mary Campbell Burns died October 15 in Newark, New Jersey where she was living. She was 43.

Funeral services were conducted late Friday at the Friendship Grove Free Will Baptist Church by Bishop R.L. Douglas. Burial was in the church cemetery.

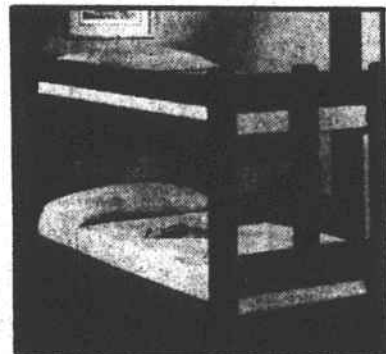

She is survived by her husband Matthew Burns of Newark; two daughters: Cynthia Campbell of Irvington, New Jersey and Demetric Burns of Newark; her father Harvey Campbell of Raeford; two sisters: Cathrine Hallman of Irvington and Cattie Hodges of Lumber City, Georgia; seven brothers: Larry, Thomas, Freddie, Marcelle, Lawrence, Randolph, and Theodore Campbell, all of New Jersey.

Doby Funeral Home assisted the family.
