Literacy information distributed

Halloween is on its way, and so is the Hoke County Public Library's annual Halloween party. Lots of spooky fun is in the works for children ages 3-11 to enjoy, including a costume contest, games, and surprises. The "Halloween Happening" will be held on Saturday, October 30 at 6:30.

Attendance at this event has increased over the years to the point that the library says it must limit admittance. "We regret that everyone who wants to attend will not be able to, but our space and staff are limited, and the party will be better and safer without the overcrowded conditions," said director Connie

Marlowe.

This year, the first 50 children who submit an illustrated book report will receive a ticket to the party. Children too young to write may do the drawing only. Reports and drawings may be submitted on forms available at the library, and be signed by a parent or guardian.

Music was provided by Mrs. J.W. Britt. Selections included "The Touch of the Way," "The Rose," and "The Perfect Love."

Mrs. Hendrix wore a pink chiffon dress with a white hat and veil and a corsage of white carnations with pearls.

The couple were escorted by their son, Chuckie Hendrix.

A reception in the fellowship hall of Hillcrest Baptist Church was hosted by Martha Jackson. There was a two-tier wedding cake and the refreshment table held a five-tier candelabra. Working under pressure?

It's O.K. that your blood exerts pressure on the walls of your blood vessels as it travels to and from your heart. That's how we're put together. But when this force is too strong it's called Hypertension, or high blood pressure, and that can put you at risk for heart attack and stroke.

Many people can manage hypertension through diet (low sodium, low fat) and exercise. Some may also need medication. But you can have high blood pressure without feeling any effects, so it's important to check your blood pressure regularly.

Our business is to help you maintain good health.
