Address,
EVENING VISITOR,
Raleigh, N. C.

The Model Husband.

He rises every morning.
Just at the break of dawn;
He lights the kitchen fire
And he puts the kettle on.

He washes all the dishes,
Puts biscuits in to bake;
And as calmly as a cyclone
Beats to tenderness the stock.

Then he dresses all the children,
Hears 'em say their morning prayers,
And lets 'em go to take the air,
Or tumble down the stairs.

He sweeps the house all over—
Knocks the dust from every shelf,
His wife—she runs for coffee,
And he just can't help himself.

LEFT BABY AT THE HOTEL.

A handsome, well-dressed woman who called at a hotel in Camden Tuesday evening hit upon a scheme for getting rid of undesirable babies far in advance of the old way of putting them in baskets and leaving them on the steps of some house. With a six-weeks-old infant in her arms, the woman arrived at the hotel and registering, was shown to a room. She sent the waiter for a bottle of warm milk, after which everything became quiet and mother and child were supposed to have retired. An hour later a messenger brought the following message:
"Go up to room No. 27 at once."
The clerk was puzzled, but finally went up and knocked on the door of the room. There was no answer, and the door being unlocked, he walked in. The woman had disappeared, but snugly tucked away in bed, with its bottle of milk and fast asleep, was the baby. On a chair near the bed was a bundle of clean baby clothing, but nothing that could in any way lead to the identification of the woman. The hotelist sent word to the police. They could do nothing, however.

A SUN GLASS.
A Practical Joker Denuded the Head of a Friend.

TRIMBLE, Tenn., Sept. 21.—A case of unusual interest will be tried at the next term of circuit court. The case is the result of a practical joke. Jim Harber and half a dozen others were sitting talking. Bob Jellow, thinking to have some fun, drew a sun glass from his pocket and focused its lens on Harber's uncovered head. Jellow expected to see Jim jump up with an explanation of pain. The glass did more than was expected of it. The concentrated rays of the sun did not reach Harber's scalp, but suddenly his head was a mass of flames, caused by the ignition of the bay rum on his hair, he having just come from the barber shop.

Others extinguished the blaze with their hats and handkerchiefs. Harber would doubtless have killed the joker had he not been restrained. He has brought suit against Jellow for $15,000 damages. Physicians say Harber's head will never be adorned with another set of hair. Jellow is very wealthy.

Bits of Fun.

Angry parent—"Young man, what were you doing at a moment ago with my daughter?" Edward—"Nothing, sir, I assure you." "And what were you doing, Helen?" Helen—"I was telling him that he must stop right off or I would scream. Indeed I was, papa."—Truth.

"Men," said Sharpe, "may be divided into two classes—knaves and fools." "That's a pretty bright remark," said uncle Silas; any man who takes you for a fool is mistaken."—Chicago Record.

"The doctors say that kissing is unhealthy," said the young man to his girl; "what do you think of it?" "I never had much faith in doctors," she replied.—New York Press.

SEQUIM, TEX., January 14, 1893.
Messrs. Lippman Bros., Savannah, Ga.: Gentlemen—I have tried your P. P.
