WIMBERLY'S WORRY.

HE FALTERED GREATLY CROSS-EXAMINATION.

The State Rests its Case and the Argument Begin . Tomorrow.

Yesterday afternoon after the Visifor went to press the cross-examination of Mills continued. Nothing of importance was brought out, though, for the flendish murderer stuck to his gnoulish tale to the most minute detail. His testimony was wonderfully delivered. It was the testimony of an unlearned, ignorant man, but at times his testimony reached the dramatic as when, feeling the deadly stick with which he had committed the crime, he raised it, leaned towards the jury box and said, a look of the most horrible and gloating triumph on his face, "I hit her so and so," striking the air with the weapon and emphasizing every blow with a frightful grimace.

The first witness called this morning was John Jinks, for the state.

He testified that he went to the old Vaughan house on Thursday morning after the murder and again on Friday, when he found a piece of paper in the house with stains on it that looked like blood. He explained that the reason he looked for the paper was that Wimberly had told him to go to the house, and try to find the bottle of laudanum and that George told him that he had left the laudanum and that if he had it he would drink it and there would be ne trial.

On cross-examination the witness said that Wimberly's character was good but that Mills' character had not been good for seven years.

The next witness called was J. D. Mills. He testified that on Thursday morning he was at Wimberly's house talking over the murder with Wimberly, Mrs. Wimberly and Savannah. He then went on to give some testimony very damaging to Wimberly. He said that Wimberly and Savannah both told him that the shirt had been washed to "hide the secret;" that when George came back he said "I did what you told me to do."

The cross examination brought out nothing except the fact that, in a conversation, Wimberly had told him that "George did not do this thing."

V. J. Batchelor was then called by state. Batchelor is the store keeper from whom Mills bought laudanum and said that Mills said he was not going back to Winberly's; that he was going to his home. He identified the paper, which, it is claimed wrapped around the bottle and which was found in the house. The cross-examination brought out nothing of interest.

Mrs. Isby Council then took the stand. Her testimony, the most important part of it, was about a conversation she had with Mills Thursday night when Mills was under arrest. He said that the tale he told on the trial was not the bottom of it; that he could not tell it all on account of 'Ad," his sister, Mrs. Wimberly.

Deputy sheriff Walters was called and asked about a conversation he had with Mills when he was taken from jail to prevent lynching, He said that Mills told him that there were others implicated besides himself and that the tale about leopard cutting was concected after he had returned to the house. On cross-examination the witness said George had told him that Julia Atwater killed the girl.

Gastou Seagraves was called. His testimony consisted of an account of the story of the rescue party, so often told, and of the finding of the girl, the rack, etc. He told of the removal of the girl. He said that he found the rack on the outside of the door. The cross-examination brought out the important little piece of evidence that the man's tracks did not come within ten feet of the well. It will be remembered that Mills yesterday testified that he threw the bottle of laudanum in the well.

After asking Dr. Cotton how long it was after the assault before Miss Wimberly died solicitor Pou rested the state's case. The first witness for the defense was A. J. Wimberly. His evidence consisted of a complete denial of Mills' testimony. He admitted that medicated for sale by John Y Macrase he had gone to see Dr. Robinson to DOTS AND DASHES see if something could not be done to relieve his daughter. The doctor told him of the dangers attending the per- MADE ABOUT TODAY'S HAPPEN-INGS.
