RALEIGH, N. C., JANUARY 22 1895

The new governor of South Carolina is only 31, the attorney general 25, and the adjutant general 24.

The Cruiser Raleigh left Norfolk yesterday for Newport, R. I., to receive her complement of torpedoes, preparatory to joining the North Atlantic squadron.

A letter has been received from an American in Turkey, stating that the authorities have closed all the colleges in Armenia, and have imprisoned 35 American professors.

The Pennsylvania railroad is about to follow the lead of the railroads in New England which have substituted electricity for steam on their short branch lines because of the cheapness of the former motive power.

A cyclone struck Covington, Tenn., early yesterday morning and blew off the top of the court house and demolished a dozen residences, a score of barns and out-houses. The damage was $50,000. No lives were lost.

From Tokio, Japan, it is learned that, in accordance with instructions from secretary Gresham, Edwin Dunn, the American minister, has informed the Japanese government that ex-secretary John W. Foster has undertaken his peace mission for China entirely on his own responsibility as far as the Washington government is concerned.

A New York court has decided that when a passenger drops a nickel on the floor of a street car, it pays his fare the same as if handed to the conductor, and that in the case of a larger coin, the conductor must give him the proper change. The theory of the decision is that the company owns the car, and a coin dropped accidentally is therefore in its custody.

Ex-captain Dreyfus, the French officer convicted of treason, has been forbidden to speak to any one during his confinement, and orders have been given not to answer him if he does speak, or to speak to him. These orders will remain in force till he reaches New Caladonia, so that he is condemned to silence for three months. His wife is with him. New Caladonia is a penal colony. He is to remain there for life.

The entire second brigade of the state of New York, nearly 3,000 strong, was ordered on duty Saturday, to preserve order in the great street car strike, but failed to restore order that day. The troops responded with surprising promptness to the call. They performed guard duty at the depots of the trolley lines and relieved the police, but the latter were not able to prevent the mobbing of cars and assaults upon employees at other points. Trolley wires were cut, motors disabled, green men stoned and maltreated and other disturbances were kept up with nearly the same disregard for the authorities that has prevailed all the week. The street car Co. failed to make good their promise to operate all lines afforded protection. Attempts at opening new lines were attended with slight success, owing to lack of capable men and to the determined opposition of the strikers at points not covered by police or troops. The troops behaved admirably. All the second brigade are Brooklyn troops. Saturday night an order was issued by brigadier general Fitzgerald, of the first brigade, of New York city, 4,800 strong, ordering all members to their armories to prepare for field duty. The greater portion of the members of the brigade answered at once to the call, and at midnight were waiting for orders to move to Brooklyn. Women of the worst class are aiding the strikers in various ways. Their behavior is as bad as that of the men.

The three women who are members of the Colorado legislature are Mrs. Francis Klock and Mrs. Clara Cressingham. They are said to be a credit to their sex in the way they took their unique situation. They kept the oath of office with dignity, and with far more ease than some of the youthful masculine legislators. They were not overcome when their brethren, in a spirit of jocularity, appointed them a committee to escort the new speaker to the chair. They are self-possessed and very watchful. They sit quietly behind their big desks from the time the speaker's gavel calls them to order until it is time to go home. They are quiet enough to suit the most fastidious clamor for peace, but what they will be after they find out the style of doing business no one will venture to guess. All men are willing to leave well enough alone and take their chances on the future.

A MISSOURI SLAUGHTER.
 The Terrible Result of an Old Fend—One Dead and One Fatally Injured.

Louis Banker is dead, Philip German is dying, W. J. Gillham fatally injured and Andrew Welch shot. This is the result of a shooting affray at Mitchell, near St. Louis. Banker and Gillham went to a saloon. They met Joseph Hank. A grudge had existed between these and was renewed on sight. The quarrel resulted in a fight, during which Gillham was floored. Hank walked into the saloon and Banker followed. Banker was given a pistol by Gillham. When he went into the saloon he backed against the bar, and, holding his revolver in a threatening attitude, he looked defiantly at those about and shouted:

"The first man who comes near will be killed."

Banker acted like a madman. Philip German, a blacksmith, was drunk, but admonished Banker to "put away that gun." Banker warned everybody to "stand back."

German reeled over toward Banker, who shot him through the neck, inflicting a fatal wound. German fell and Banker would have shot him again had not Mrs. Martin, the saloon-keeper's wife, prevented him. Banker attempted to shoot Mrs. Martin, and would have succeeded had not Andrew Welch prevented this by grappling with the infuriated man. Welch was shot in the arm. He feigned death, and to this he owes his life. Banker, thinking he had killed two men, was either overcome with the appalling aspect of the case or was seized with contrition and remorse. He rushed out on the porch where he placed the revolver to his temple and sent a bullet crashing through his brain. He died in half an hour.

German and Mrs. Martin walked out to where Gillham lay in the hallway. They presumed Gillham was responsible for the ghastly work of Banker, and set upon him and gave him such a beating that his death is momentarily expected.

37 DROWNED.

The steamer struck a rock and sunk in 50 feet of water. Only fragmentary details have been received and no names are given.

A Dog Saved His Life.
 MAINLION, O., Jan. 21.—An intelligent dog saved David Von Kanel, porter at the hotel Conrad, from death last night. The man is subject to fits, and fell unconscious while working in the boiler pit. In his writhing he put his feet in the furnace, and was burning when the dog gave the alarm. When VonKanel was found his shoes had been burned off his feet.

What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When accompanied with water it is pleasant to take. For sale by J. Hal Bobbitt, druggist.
