HUNDREDS STARVING.

Awful Tales of Suffering from Nebraska—Help Needed.

Greeley Centre, Neb., Jan. 21.—The distress in this part of the state is appalling. No picture of the suffering has been overdrawn, and a great many sad cases have been suppressed. Thus far stock has lived by pasturing on the dry grass, and there has been but little cold weather and no snow.

Hundreds of families have nothing to eat and no fuel, and children are so nearly naked that they are kept from school. At least one-fifth of the people of this county have become county charges, which has depleted the treasury and depreciated county paper until it is not worth more than half its face value, and is still going down. It is impossible for the people to care for the destitute, and unless a large amount of outside assistance is received at once some of the worthy farmers and their families will perish. The people mostly need clothing, and anything in that line cannot fail to alleviate the suffering.

Some of the best farmers, whose lands are unincumbered, are as destitute as tenants, because they cannot realize on any kind of class of securities. A great many of the floating population left the state last fall, and all who are here are actual residents, most of them owning their homes. All the hogs and salable cattle have been sold and shipped away, and they have only to depend upon charity, and if that fails, it is certain death.

A BIG BLIZZARD.

It Will Descend Upon Kansas and Nebraska Unfortunates.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 21.—Reports from western Colorado indicate that a big blizzard is working rapidly eastward. The wind is high and the temperature is rapidly falling. The snow is very heavy in the mountains, and great damage, with possible fatalities from snow slides, are expected. This storm is general and will work hardships to the sufferers on the Nebraska and Kansas farms.

FOR A MAIDEN'S HAND.

The Farmer Boys Battle for Thirty-Two Rounds.

HENNESSY, Okla., January 21.—Two farmer boys Dick Moore and Ike Flood, were courting Anna Swaeringer. As she showed no preference for either, they decided to settle it between themselves. Seconds were chosen and a well known sporting gentleman of Hennessy referred the fight, Queensbury rules governing. Moore weighing 183 pounds and Flood 175. They fought with bare knuckles. It lasted thirty-two rounds. Knock down after knock down was scored by both Flood and Moore, and in the thirteenth round Flood lay on the floor eight seconds, but got up and severely punished Moore. As time was called for the thirty second round, Flood rushed at Moore, landing heavily on his heart with his right, following it up with a terrible swing on the point of the jaw. Moore fell, striking his head on the hard floor and was unconscious for nine minutes. Both men are sights to behold. Their bodies and their faces are masses of bruises. It was the bloodiest encounter that ever occurred in this part of the country.

He then turned the weapon upon himself, the charge landing in his intestines. O'Brien is a miser, and the shooting was occasioned by his wife selling four chickens and using some of the proceeds to purchase sugar. Both are dangerously wounded and will die.
