THE ANNIVERSARY

Exercises Began at Wake Forest College This Afternoon.

This morning a number of Raleigh people left here for Wake Forest college to attend the annual anniversary exercises there. The exercises began this afternoon.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Wingate memorial hall there was held an intersociety debate. The subject of debate was "Ought the House of Maws to be Abolished." The debates are generally of great interest as the Wake Forest students take exceptional interest in the literary societies and this year there will be no exception to the rule. A feature of these debates is that there is no committee to decide the question but the audience makes its own decision.

At 8:30 o'clock this evening the annual orations will be delivered by two selected speakers, one from the Euzelian and the other from the Philomethesian societies. The speakers of the occasion will be Messrs. R. T. Daniel and W. C. Newton. After the speaking a public social gathering is held in the society halls and is one of the most pleasant features of these anniversaries.

Among the Raleigh people who left today to attend the exercises are Mrs. T. H. Briggs, Mrs. John D. Briggs, Miss Lizzie Briggs, Miss Mattie Pace, Mr. William West, register of deeds Rogers, Miss Rogers, Miss Bessie Devin and Mr. Oscar Riddick.

ABOUT IN SPOTS.

NEWS THAT HAPPENED HERE AND THERE TODAY.

Dug up and Carefully Prepared for the Visitor.

The little child of Mr. T. O. Faucette is quite sick with bronchitis.

The senate will consider the confederate monument bill on the 23d of February.

Mr. A. Dugli today received a handsome new peanut roaster, one of the finest in the state.

The educational committee has made no report on the book question nor will it for several days.

The bill to regulate warehouse charges for handling tobacco comes up in the house tomorrow morning.

Many people did not, probably, see it but nevertheless it snowed today. Just a few flakes and then all was over.

There was a runaway on S. Wilmington street this morning but no damage was done beyond the breaking of the harness.

The famous election law bill was introduced in the house today. The copy was prepared for the printer by Col. A. W. Shaffer.

Next Friday the bill to create the county of Marion, with Dunn as the county seat is to come up before the house committee on counties.

Farmers are doing absolutely nothing now. The cold weather has stopped even what little farm work could have been done in the "off season."

Memorial exercises on the life of our lamented brother E. B. Englehard will be held at Phalanx hall this evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance desired.

Yesterday evening a committee from the legislature went over and inspected the institution for the blind. Afterwards they were entertained at dinner by superintendent Young.

A ledger was picked up in the street today by a gentleman and left at the Park hotel. On the back is the name, F. A. Finlayson, Goldsboro. The owner may get it by calling on clerk Charles Benbow.

A number of the employees of the Seaboard Air Line voluntarily loaded ten cars with old railway ties which were then hauled to Henderson by the company and distributed among the poor.

Tomorrow superintendent McMaackin will put his road force at work again on the Hillsboro road. The convicts have had nearly a two weeks rest now, as Mr. McMaackin does not work them in bad weather.

This morning the Haywood residence, corner of Blount and Edenton streets, was sold at auction by auctioneer Stronach. The price paid was low for such property, $1,905. The purchaser was Mr. F. M. Farnsworth.

Tomorrow before the joint committee on education Capt. W. B. Kendrick is to speak on the school book question, his request to that effect having been granted. The committee will then prepare its report on the bill.

Today a Wake farmers institute began at the A. & M. college, president Holladay presiding. Among the speakers were H. O. Battle, J. D. Hoyt, W. F. Massey, W. W. Barringer, R. B. C. Hawley and Eugene D'Alings. The institute continues tomorrow.

This afternoon the caucus committee of the fusionists met to consider the county government bill. Republicans allege that one of the provisions of the bill will be stricken out; this being the one which requires the assent of four out of the five commissioners to any final action.

A sight not usually seen was witnessed in the house today. It was the sight of a dignified and pretentious looking "laborer" dressed in a cutaway suit and immaculate linen actually washing inkstand. It is a strange sight to see one of these gentlemen at work at all. But when they do they work with an air of superiority that makes the average citizen want to go through the floor.

GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION.

Given to the Schools and the Public—An Enjoyable Occasion.

Governor Carr's receptions are looked on as big social events and that is why the citizens of Raleigh turned out in such goodly numbers to the mansion last evening. That the reception would be enjoyable they well knew and that is why they went. They were not disappointed. The governor is particularly fortunate in having the ability to make his receptions hospitable and informal. There is a charm of unconventionality about them that carries people away yet cannot be exactly defined. No one has that strained feeling that is so apt to make receptions a bore and where all are at ease they may be relied upon to enjoy themselves.

The reception last evening was given particularly to the pupils of the various schools and they were there in numbers. The pupils of Peace institute, St. Mary's and the A. and M. college attended in a body. All of them mixed with each other and with the numbers of citizens who were present, combined to form a picture of vivacious life such as is seldom seen in Raleigh. A very enjoyable feature of the evening's entertainment was a musical program rendered by the fair pupils of Peace and St. Mary's.

In the large, handsome parlor on the left governor Carr, Mrs. William Kearney Carr and Miss Mary Davis received the guests. The evening was a particularly pleasant one to those who attended, as all who went well knew it would be.

A Card.

Editor EVENING VISITOR:

In reply to your "Ice house" article of yesterday, permit me to say that it was no fault of the local management that the academy was not heated properly Wednesday night. I had the burgled pipes repaired and had the steam turned on during the day and every thing was O. K., but at night the steam trap froze so we could not get the steam in the building. This was an accident and no one deplored the situation more than I did. I went behind the stage and at my request Mr. Young made a statement of the cold house which I thought was satisfactory to all except your reporter. I shall take the utmost precaution hereafter to have the house properly heated, but I would suggest that it would be far better if your reporter would take the trouble to find out the facts before he makes charges of oversight. The company did not even complain as they saw it was no fault of mine.

Yours truly,
G. D. MEARES.

A Reply to a "Reply."

A communication from Prof. Meares in regard to the article about the "She" performance, headed "at the Ice house" is in this column. Unfortunately I was one of those who attended and I wrote feelingly. As to "Ice house," that was what the academy was generally dubbed before the play had progressed five minutes. If the absence of heat in the hall was caused by no oversight of the local management it is the more reprehensible. If the pipes froze and Prof. Meares saw that a heat could be had he should have declared the performance off and refunded the money. Then, no one could have blamed him. But to compel an audience to endure such cold as prevailed in the academy is a reprehensible act and one that endangered the lives of those present. I contend, and I believe that every one present will stand with me, that I had good grounds for the remarks I made.

THE REPORTER.

In speaking of the death of Mr. Zoe Lemay Mr. T. R. Parnell told the Visitor that Mr. Lemay and Mr. Ed. Mr. Lemay and Mr. Rogers raised the flag from the window of Mr. Parnell's room, for doing which they were put under arrest.

BUTLER'S COMMISSION.

It Was Issued by the Governor this Morning.

This morning Marion Butler came into the possession of an article that it falls to the lot of few men to possess, a senatorial commission, which entitles him to sit in that illustrious body of statesmen.

He will remain here until the next session of congress when he will leave for Washington where he will sit with his lately elected colleague, Mr. Pritchard.

Mr. Butler's course in the senate will be watched with the greatest interest by the people of North Carolina and the country. He is a conspicuous figure, not because he will represent North Carolina in the senate chamber, but because he is the representative of the populist party, as young in the politics of the nation as is Mr. Butler himself. Though he will be the youngest man in the senate and the youngest man who has sat in that body since the time of Henry Clay, Mr. Butler has shown that for executive ability and political shrewdness he is entitled to rank with the first politicians of the country. If his course in congress is as full of earnest effort for principle as was his course in the last campaign for office, North Carolina will yet be proud of him. The people's eyes are upon him. They shall see.

The commission was issued this morning by governor Carr.

The bill for the change of directors or trustees of the institution for the blind here names as trustees W. S. Barnes, D. H. Young, B. F. Montague, J. D. Byran, John Nichols, N. F. Roberts, L. H. Adams, J. M. Templeton, J. H. Young, W. B. Upechurch, G. W. Blacknall. These are also named as trustees for the colored deaf mute. N. B. Broughton is named as a trustee of the deaf mute school at Morganton in the bill changing its trustees.
