The Famous Andrews Company May be Here.

For some time manager Meares has been in negotiation with the manager of the Andrews opera company, his object being to induce the company to give Raleigh a season of first-class grand and comic opera for 2 nights during the week of June 10, but as it is an expensive one its manager declines to place it unless at least a part of the actual expense is provided for in the way of a guarantee.

Ex-alderman Pat Stewart was asked today what he and ex-alderman King proposed to do about being ousted from the board of aldermen. He said he had not determined on his course; that is as to whether any steps would be taken or not. He said he really did not know just what to do, and of course could take no steps until the October civil term of the superior court.

U. S. Circuit Court.

About fifteen cases were taken up today in this court and there were something like eight or nine convictions, nearly all of moonshining with out license. The case of a man named Morrison, 93 years old, who sold moonshine whiskey last Christmas was called out of order, marshal Carroll saying that Morrison was in jail and was very sick. The case was nolle pro'd, and several officials chipped in and bought Morrison a ticket to Carthage. The court is crowded and the odors there are awful. The post-office steps and corridors are sights to behold.

A Banker's Fall.

BRISTOL, Tenn., May 28.—Fields N. Hask, a well known man in east Tennessee, and a former president of the Merchants' exchange bank of this city, has been arrested at Morristown, Tenn. on a charge of murdering a barber named Palmer for $18. Hask has had a curious career since he came to Bristol about eight years ago with $75,000 in cash, the life earnings of himself and his aged father. Young Hask opened a dry goods store, and soon sold it to his three clerks for $18,000, to be paid out of the earnings but before half of the sum had been paid he attached the goods, for no reason, apparently. The matter got into the courts and remained there till all of the money was consumed. He went to Morristown and opened a restaurant.

The next annual meeting will be held at Charlotte next February. J. T. Thacker is recommended as deputy national councillor for North Carolina. The Raleigh council last evening banqueted the delegates. Covers were laid for 75. Dughi served and the affair was handsome. Rev. J. L. Foster made a speech of welcome and Rev. C. A. G. Thomas of Greensboro replied to it.

OFF FOR NORFOLK.

The Baptist tabernacle excursion train for Norfolk left the union depot early this morning. There were two sections, one leaving at 5:45 and one at 6. In each there were seven cars, and all were pretty well filled. The railway people made the estimate that about 1200 left here. Others were picked up along the line between here and Weldon. The Sunday school of the tabernacle is the biggest in the state, having over 1000 pupils. Last year it carried 1340 on its excursion to Wilmington. A telegram from Weldon says both trains passed there promptly on time. Some of the excursionists will return tonight. Many will remain a day or two longer. They reached Portsmouth at 10:45.

CIVIL SERVICE.

A Board of Examiners for the Revenue Service Here.

Today Mr. George B. Hoyt of the revenue department arrived here from Washington, D. C., and spent the day in conference with collector Simmons' officers in the government building. Mr. Hoyt said the object of his visit was to classify the service in this revenue district. He selected the names of three persons to compose a local board of civil service examiners. All the revenue officials save the deputy collectors are now under civil service rules. Mr. Hoyt says the deputy collectors will soon be embraced in the provisions of the civil service.

The State Records.

The work of printing the three or four volumes of "State Records" which are to continue Col. W. L. Saunders' "Colonial Records" down to January 1, 1790, will begin at once under the supervision of judge Walter Clark, who is now having the remainder of the material searched for and copied for the printer. The last legislature also authorized a combined index of the whole series, colonial and state, which will be made under judge Clark's supervision by Dr. Stephen B. Weeks. This will be good news to all who wish to consult these records, but who have hitherto found them practically a sealed book for want of an index.

Henry A. London of Pittsboro, member of the democratic state committee, today writes the Charlotte Observer the following: "Col. Paul B. Means was mistaken in publishing my name among the members of the state democratic executive committee who adopted and promulgated a series of resolutions at their recent meeting. I was not present at that meeting, either in person or by proxy, it being one of the few meetings of the committee that I have not attended during the 23 years that I have been a member thereof. And during that long period I have never before known the committee to attempt thus to usurp the functions of a state convention."

Sunday evening at Burnsville Wayland Hoss rode up to the law office of C. F. Watson, in which J. Bishop Ray was dressing, and asked Ray to lend him his pistol. Ray refused, seeing that Hoss was under the influence of liquor. Hoss dismounted and went to the door with his hand in his hip pocket. Ray pushed him back and advised him to go home, whereupon Hoss started for the door threatening to shoot Ray. As he approached Ray fired, killing Hoss almost instantly. Both had been fast friends up to the time of the difficulty. Ross is a son of Garrett Ray, a well-known wealthy merchant. There is great excitement. Ray has escaped.
