

RALEIGH MILL.

THE ANNEX IS NOW NEARLY READY FOR MACHINERY.

The Low-Pressure Cylinder Will Be Connected in a Day or Two.

In August, 1889, the Raleigh hosiery yarn mill was made a certainty by a stock subscription by some 150 persons. In September, 1890, it began work. It has been well managed and successful. There are now 75 employes and 8,700 spindles. There is no mill in this state which does the same work; that is makes hosiery yarns. The annex, just completed, has 135 feet front and is 100 feet in depth. The old position of the mill is 226 feet by 75, so the total front is 351. The annex is 3 stories high. It is built to contain 9,300 spindles, but only 4,600 are to be put in now. By September 30 the latter will be in place. The annex was begun in April. The finishing work is now being done on its floors, the lower one of which is rubble stone and cement. Today the mill was shut down for two or three days until the low pressure cylinder can be put in. This cylinder is 36 x 48 inches, while the high pressure one is 20 x 48. The low pressure will use the steam after the high pressure has used it. This makes the engine complete and 500 horse-power. The output of the mill is from 18,000 to 22,000 pounds of hosiery yarns weekly, according to the fineness of the yarn. In the old part the yarns run from five to twenties; in the new they will run as high as thirties. The spinning is all done by "males." The other kind of spinners are known as "ring spinners," but the threads cannot be watched and breaks fixed as in the case of the "male" spinners, though the latter require more employes. The spindles in the annex will be on the second floor now, while the carding machines will be on the third floor. The first floor will for the present be used for packing. Mr. H. B. Greason, the mill superintendent, is a most useful man and a master of his business. He has been with the mill ever since it started.

Many of the Finest Specimens in the Museum Go

This morning the special committee, Messrs. W. F. Green, J. M. Mewborne, H. B. Battle, and F. K. Brainer, appointed by the board of agriculture to take action in regard to the exhibit from the museum to be sent to the Atlanta exposition, met and unanimously decided to let Drs. Day and Fernow of the U. S. forestry and geological divisions take a number of specimens from the state's collection. This will not be a state exhibit. It is a loan to the government of North Carolina specimens to fill gaps in the U. S. exhibit. The building stones, coal, iron and gold ores and part of the forestry exhibit will thus be lent for display. By September 18 all are to be in place at Atlanta. They will fill about 150 feet of floor space.

The hawk, to the surprise of the lady who owned the chicken, quickly brought it back and placed it in the yard again.

A Sea Serpent Caught at Last.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The night watch on Blackwell's Island turned out and, according to their account, captured a sea serpent after a hard battle. He was sailing through the East river, evidently making a short cut from Long Island sound, where he has been playing to crowded houses, to the New Jersey coast resorts. He allowed himself to run aground, and the guards attacked him and dragged him ashore. The serpent is 25 feet long and has a short head and a short tail. He has large, sharp teeth, and with these made violent attempts to bite them. He betrayed his presence to one of the guards, by his cries of distress when he found himself on the ground. At first he tried to climb off the reef, but finding this impossible, began to yell vigorously. The night guard said the cry sounded like one of pain from a big dog.

What Difference Does it Make?

From a sanitary point of view what difference does it make whether a man cultivates in his front yard grass, weeds, peas, corn, collards, rose bushes or chrysanthemums? Is the discrimination the use or abuse of the exercise of arbitrary power, that is a weakness of human nature? Will some of our solons who are high up in hygienic science please enlighten an ignorant public? O.

The nights have been rather cool and are checking the growth of cotton. Upon the August weather the crop depends. Some farmers say cotton is not making much progress. All are willing to admit they never saw a better corn crop. There is no doubt that the cotton has been made this year more cheaply than ever before; in fact the cost of making this crop has been reduced by the very pressure of necessity.
