HEROES OF WAR AND PEACE

- Ay, that is a star that takes one's breath.
- How the men bowed out in the face of death.
- Rowed as calmly as fishermen may.
- Who haul their nets at the break of day.
- But never was fish net hauled in the weather.
- That rife and cannon shelled to gether.
- Rained on those sailors who drew from its bed.
- The wise sea serpent and crushed its head.
- Heroes of war are they! Song and story.
- Shall add their names to the list of glory.
- But where is the story and where is the song.
- For the heroes of peace and the martyrs of wrong.
- They fight their battles in shop and mine.
- They die at their post and make no sign.
- And the living envy the fortunate dead.
- As they fight for a pittance of a butterless bread.
- They herd like beasts in a slaughter pen.
- They live like cattle and suffer like men.
- Why, set they the horrors of such a life!
- Like a merry-go-round seems the battle's strife.
- And the open sea, and the open boat.
- And the deadly cannon with belching throat.
- Oh! what are they all, with death thrown in.
- To the life that has nothing to lose or win.
- The life that has nothing to hope for gain.
- But ill-paid labor and beds of pain.
- Fame, where is your story and where is your song.
- For the martyrs of peace and the victims of wrong.
- Ella Wheeler Wilcox in The New York Journal.

Now that news of a conflict may come at any moment, the American army being successfully disembarked near to and ready to move upon Santiago, General Miles is anxious to slip in about the time Shafter and Sampson shall have gained a decisive victory, and claim a participation in the campaign and its results with a view to aiding him in bottling the Lieutenant-General. But General Shafter will be permitted to finish up the job so elegantly begun by himself, and General Miles may join him in time or organize the Porto Rican expedition, Secretary Alger, President McKinley and the general public are content for Shafter to be allowed a wide discretion in his military operations so well under headway under his individual management which is commended, in highest terms of praise, without the use of porcelain bath tubs or Tuxedo coat.

Commenting upon the unfitness of Major General Miles for the Lieutenant-Generalcy of the United States Army, other than as a reward of longevity of commission, the Washington Post says:

But Gen. Miles has his opportunity at last. The United States is at war and important military operations are on foot. He will have every chance to distinguish himself as a leader, a soldier, and a strategist. There is no one to block the way of his advancement or dim the lustre of his deeds. Let him muzzle the lobbies that are clamoring for his promotion in advance of his achievement, let him lay that Tuxedo coat in its little nest of moth-balls, dispense with the dazzling pageantry in which he usually moves, go to the front in the simple, soldierly fashion which becomes the truly great warrior and which great warriors in the past have generally adopted, in a word let him earn the Lieutenant-Generalcy as his predecessors did. Then the Post will be the first to congratulate him, and every honest man throughout the land will rejoice in his promotion.

OVERDOING.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
Michael Davitt is overdoing his part in the constant and venomous opposition which he is making to any better understanding between this country and Great Britain. He ridiculously overstates the number of Irishmen and citizens of Irish descent in this country, and then asks the world, is it possible that any good relations should be tolerated between the oppressor of Ireland and that enlightened land where so many of my exiled fellow countrymen have found a home? Mr. Davitt would be wrong to assume that we exist chiefly for the purpose of pleasing Ireland and Irishmen. Irishmen are warmly welcomed here, and have done well here, but this is no soil for the nursing of race hatreds, or national hatreds. Some of Mr. Davitt's countrymen at home are refuting his assertions and arguments in vigorous style, and it is altogether likely that if his ill-timed propaganda falls on the other side it will stand less chance of success here.

POSSIBLY.

From the Springfield Republican.
If the Spanish government can make its unlettered people believe that this war to date has been a series of brilliant Spanish victories, why can it not conclude a peace on the basis of the surrender of Cuba and Porto Rico, and assert a home revolution, through the simple expedient of announcing the surrender of the United States and the cession of half its territory to the "Castilian crown"? It may yet be written across the face of the Bourbon regime, "Saved by the power of Amaliam."

COMPARATIVELY UNIMPORTANT.

From the Providence Journal.
The Senate need not spend much time in considering the Hawaiian annexation project. That has become a comparatively unimportant detail in a far larger national policy, which has been forced upon us by developments that were not of our seeking.

CURIOUS WELL IN HAWAII.

Flow of Artesian Water—Low in the Morning and High in the Afternoon.
A most curious phenomenon has been observed in the flow of an artesian well on Kealia plantation, Kauai. The water has regular variations in its flow, being lowest at 8 o'clock in the morning, gradually rising until it attains its greatest flow at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and then as gradually falling until 8 o'clock in the morning. Manager George H. Fairchild, of the plantation, thus describes the peculiar phenomenon:
"The top of the pipe is thirteen feet above sea level. At eight feet there is a flow of about one million gallons in twenty-four hours. By adding five more feet of pipe the flow stops. We have had this extra five feet of pipe on top of the well for a month or more, waiting for extra pipe to conduct the water to the mill where it is to be used. We have noticed a peculiar action in this column of water, and I have been unable to find any explanation of it. If the publication of the fact by the Star will lead to an explanation, I will be very much gratified."
The column of water in this five feet additional pipe placed to prevent the flow at 8 o'clock in the morning is at its lowest point and one and a half inches below the top of the pipe. Then it rises, until at noon it begins to flow over the pipe. The flow increases until 2 o'clock, when there is quite a flow. From that time it gradually falls, until at 11 o'clock at night there is a very slight flow, and this ceases at 1 o'clock in the morning, the water gradually falling until it reaches the lowest point, at 8 o'clock, when it begins to rise again.

"It has been suggested that this change of flow is due to the tides, or to the rotation of the earth, or to the influence of the sun. It is interesting, and I should like a satisfactory explanation."
Representative McCandless says regarding this phenomenon that in his experience where an artesian well is influenced by the tides the water never rises above the sea level.—Hawaiian Star.

JUST ARRIVED.
One of the Boston Photo companies have arrived, and we can say for them that their work is all they claim it to be. This is the same company that was in Winston, Salem, and Charlotte. They have just come in from Greensboro, where they finished over six thousand photos in less than three weeks. All the papers speak well of them, and we are sure they will do a good business in our city.

FULTON'S TORPEDOES.

An Attempt at the Explosives by the Inventor of the Steamboat—A Timid Audience.

Before he turned his attention to navigation by steam, Robert Fulton invented a marine torpedo which he endeavored to dispose of to the United States government. Succeeded in interesting James Madison, then Secretary of State, in the matter, he obtained a small appropriation from the government for the purpose of conducting some public experiments. In the summer of 1806 he invited the high dignitaries and a number of prominent citizens of New York to Governor's island to see the torpedoes and machinery with which his experiments were to be made. While he was lecturing on his blank torpedoes, which were large, empty copper cylinders, his numerous auditors crowded around him. After a while he turned to a copper case of the same description, which was placed under the gateway of old Castle William, and to which was attached a clockwork lock.

Drawing out a peg, Fulton set the clock in motion, and then he said in solemn tones to his attentive audience: "Gentlemen, this is a charged torpedo, with which precisely in its present state I mean to blow up a vessel; it contains 150 pounds of gunpowder, and if I were to suffer the clockwork to run fifteen minutes I have no doubt that it would blow this fortification to atoms."

The circle of humanity which had closed around the inventor, began to spread out and grow thinner, and before five of the fifteen minutes had passed there were but two or three persons remaining under the gateway. Some, indeed, lost no time in getting at the greatest possible distance from the torpedo, and they did not again appear on the ground until they were assured that the engine of destruction was safely lodged in the magazine, whence it had been taken. The local historian of that period remarks: "The conduct of Mr. Fulton's auditors was not very extraordinary or unusual, but his own composure indicated the confidence with which he handled these terrible instruments of destruction and the reliance he had on the accuracy of the performance of his machinery. The apprehensions of his friends surprised and amused him, and he took occasion to remark how true it was that fear frequently arose from ignorance."—Scientific American.

THE ATTEMPT FRUSTRATED.

"If the report in circulation today is true, Honolulu came near being the scene of as frightful a disaster as that of the Maine and in much the same way. The story is to the effect that an attempt was made to blow up the Pekin magazine. It was frustrated just in time. An enlisted man, it is said, was caught arranging a fuse connecting with the magazine. The magazine contains 400 tons of powder and had been guarded closely. The dastard, it is said, is now under the closest guard and when the Pekin gets out on the high seas will be hanged at the yard arm."

The greatest secrecy concerning the matter is being maintained for fear it would depress the spirit of the present occasion. The alleged culprit is said to be half Spaniard. The publication caused a sensation in this city. Military officers on the ship denied the truth of the story, but their denial was made in a half-hearted way. There are many corroborative features which tend to prove the truth of the report which was at first circulated by enlistmen. Others admitted that the Spanish halfbreed was on board the Pekin. Two Honolulu citizens state that they were on the Pekin on June 3rd when they saw a man in irons and under close guard. They were convinced that the prisoner was the man who attempted to blow up the ship.

THE OLD BRIGADE.

The new brigades are mighty fine—the boys are brave 'n' true, An' the gray is marchin' side by side with them that wore the blue; I see 'em on the hilltops—they're drillin' in the glades, But we won't forget the old boys who made the old brigades.

We won't forget the fellers that fought on land 'n' sea, An' foller'd "Stonewall" Jackson 'n' charged with old Bob Lee! An' Grant's an' Sherman's feller's—their nemory never fades; We won't forget the old boys who made the old brigades.

They're thinnin' out—the old boys—they're few now on the sod; They're crossin'—crossin' over to the campin' grounds of God; I see the young boys marchin' on hills 'n' fields 'n' glades, But we won't forget the old boys who made the old brigades.

A Tumor Formed Finally It Broke Inwardly and Discharged

Trouble Began With Discharge and Impure Blood

Thorough Course of Hood's Sarsaparilla Completely Cured

There is danger in ignoring skin disease and suffering against the advice of those who have been cured of the same symptoms. Read that "C. I. Hood & Co. Sarsaparilla" "Gentlemen—My wife had a tumor on her neck which had been there for two or three years. It was pronounced by a doctor to be a cancer, and they could not do anything for it. I advised a change of blood, and she took of a tumor formed on her neck, which was very painful.

but did not rise or discharge. The tumor thought best to cut it out, but I refused. It finally broke and discharged a great deal. The doctors said they could do nothing for it. Then the tumor began to rise inwardly and discharge. I read much about cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and thought I would try it. Before I had finished taking one bottle I was much relieved. I continued the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking 12 bottles was entirely cured. I am now well, have a good appetite and feel that I owe my life to Hood's Sarsaparilla." W. D. EARL, Waa Voo, Hawaii.
