INSURGENTS ARE GETTING UNRULY

Conflict Between Americans and Garcia's Men Expected.

GENERAL GARCIA CONFERS WITH GOMEZ

Alger Says the Trouble Will be Quickly Met—German Admiral Says He Prevented Bombardment in the Philippines.

INSURGENTS MAY GIVE TROUBLE.

By Cable to The Times-Visitor.

SANTIAGO, July 20.—General Garcia has left the Cuban camp with a body of picked men. He started westward to meet and confer with General Gomez relative to grievances against the Americans. He makes no secret of his resentment against General Shafter on account of the course pursued since the surrender of the city. The coming conference with the Cuban commander in chief is regarded as of the utmost importance. General Garcia is especially dissatisfied over the fact that Cuban soldiers were not permitted in the city until evacuated by the Spanish, General Shafter thinking the danger of a riot too great.

Kibben has established a thorough system of patrolling city. A number of insurgents have been arrested and turned over to the military authorities for being entered disguised as refugees and attempting to provoke the Spaniards to street riots. This action intensified the feeling among insurgents that the Americans will ignore them in the future form of government. The Spanish volunteers are growing restless at the rumor that they will be sent from the island. They may prove troublesome.

The authorities of Santiago received a letter from the volunteers demanding that they show less friendship with the Americans.

GARCIA MUST RESTRAIN MEN.

By Telegraph to The Times-Visitor.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Some apprehension is felt as to the outcome of the strained relations between Americans and the Cubans at Santiago but Secretary Alger makes light of the alleged friction. He says if trouble occurs it will be quickly met and conveniently.

Representatives of the Junta are not in sympathy with the desires of the Cubans to sack the city. They have called Garcia to restrain the men, and permit no actions that will compel the United States to suppress them as menaces to public safety. There is doubt in official circles that the Cuban republic will be ignored for the present.

EAGER TO LOOT CITY.

By Cable to The Times-Visitor.

SANTIAGO, July 20.—Cuban troops are reported to be eager to loot the city. General Shafter forbade the Cubans to enter. The relations with our officers are consequently strained. It is evident that probably an early collision will take place between our troops and the Cubans. They realize the rising sentiment against them among the American troops. Even our officers openly display contempt for them. It is reported that they have been both lazy and filthy. Their language also filthy. Demands for fighting or work. General Shafter and Admiral Sampson have come to a disagreement regarding the prizes found in the harbor. Both claim the honor.

CARLISTS ARE CONTIDENT.

By Cable to The Times-Visitor.

London, July 20.—English reports say the Carlists are active and ready for an uprising against the Spanish government, which is believed to be imminent. The Carlists claim to be well supplied with money and are confident that the effort to overthrow the throne will be successful.

THRASHED THE MINISTER.

By Cable to The Times-Visitor.

VANCOUVER, July 20.—It is reported in the press eastward that the German minister at Seoul severely thrashed the Korean minister of foreign affairs on account of the latter's refusal to grant certain mining privileges to Germans in the district of Kieju.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Governor Russell Attending the Convention

A. E. HOLTON'S SPEECH.

J. C. L. Harris Failed to Get On the Reform Committee—Contests from Union and Cumberland—Afternoon Session.

The convention of the Republican party of North Carolina convened in Metropolitan Hall to-day shortly after noon. The personnel of the convention was far above that of the average Republican gathering; this was due perhaps to the fact that the office holders predominated.

Exactly at noon Governor Russell made his way down the center aisle amid dead silence. However, Assistant District Attorney Wheeler Martin, of Williamston, and others soon gathered about the Governor and welcomed him. He was surrounded by a small group until Chairman Holton's gavel fell. The Governor took a seat in the delegation from the Sixth district.

Last evening the delegations from the various Congressional districts met to select their representatives on the committees. The anti-Russell men stole a march on the Governor's friends in this, the Fourth district. The delegates from Wake county are J. C. L. Harris, C. T. Bailey, J. P. H. Adams, E. A. Johnson, James H. Young and Jerry Smith. The delegation from this district met at the Yarrowhouse last night and Harris and Young knew nothing about the meeting. Indeed Jim Young says that not half of the thirty delegates were present. C. T. Bailey was selected to represent the district on the State committee, a colored man, Eaton, from Vance, on the platform committee and J. T. Thornburg of Randolph on the credential committee. Mr. Harris had been slated for the committee on platform and he is hot at the method used in selecting the representatives.

The only other significant events of these caucuses were a fight between the Russell and anti-Russell men in the First district over membership on the platform committee in which District Attorney Claude Bernard was victorious, and a contest in the Seventh ward membership on the State committee in which Postmaster Long of Statesville defeated Mr. Warren V. Hall by two votes.

Nearly every officeholder was present either as a delegate or spectator. Col. Jim Young, Lieut. Henry Christmas, Maj. Smith and Adjutant Walker of the colored regiment were conspicuous in their uniforms.

Chairman A. E. Holton called the convention to order at 2:15. He addressed the body as follows:

"I congratulate you upon the results accomplished in the recent campaigns in this State in making every ballot too sacred to be touched by the hands of ballot box stuffers and unscrupulous politicians, who for years robbed you of your political rights and then mocked when you demanded an investigation. (Applause.)

"By your efforts every qualified elector of our State can now cast one ballot with the assurance that it will be counted as cast, and that too to the great annoyance and discomfort of our Democratic friends, who so recently met in this city in solemn convention and declared in one short sentence that they were in favor of a fair election law. Need we make any comments upon this demand for fair elections, when for twenty years they juggled with the ballot box and allowed you to exercise the sacred rights of an American citizen, as they called it, with the full assurance that your vote would be counted Democratic, regardless of how you voted.

"No sane man will rely for a moment upon this Democratic promise of fair elections, which reminds us of what has been said of his satanic majesty when contagious diseases were sweeping over his kingdom. 'When the devil gets sick the devil a saint would be, when the devil got well a devil of a saint is he.' The boys are sick now.

"No greater issue has ever confronted the people of our State than the question involved in this campaign, upon it depends your political liberty for the next twenty years. The sacredness of the ballot box can never be too highly appreciated by a people living under a Republican form of government, where the will of the people must be supreme.

"The honor of the nation has been involved in the result of the war with Spain, and our brave boys have been shedding their blood upon the field of battle to preserve the name of America, untarnished in war, for this the nation owes them a debt of gratitude it can never repay; to perpetuate the sacredness of the ballot and to maintain the liberty guaranteed to us by the Constitution we have an equal if not a superior duty to perform in guarding with our ballots the prisoners of war we captured in '94 and '96 in our struggle for a free ballot and a fair count, we cannot allow them even to be paroled or transported without arms, but must guard them with a vigilance unknown to warfare, or they will recover and we will then realize what their demands for a fair election mean.

"Again I congratulate you upon your having a Republican administration under which this war with Spain is being conducted. The victories of the army and navy are now conceded by all to be largely due to the wise and patriotic action of President McKinley in its early stages, when the whole nation seemed to be wild with the demand to avenge without delay the blood of the victims of the Maine, with strong hand and patriotic heart he held back the war clouds while rapidly strengthening both army and navy, thus making victory sure—vanquishing the enemy in a manner heretofore unknown to warfare, with the highest regard for the comfort and welfare of those engaged in battle. (Applause.)

"He now mourns with the people of our State the loss of the brave soldier boys who have poured out their blood upon the field of battle, and has shown himself to be the President of the whole nation—breaking down all sectional lines, until the North and the South now stand side by side to protect untarnished the stars and stripes and the hearts of the whole people now beat in unison to make this the greatest nation on earth, and this work will redound to the prosperity of this nation for generations to come.

"Let us do the work of this convention with an eye single to the welfare of the people of our beloved State and the perpetuation of this the greatest Republic." (Applause.)

The speech of the chairman was significant in that no reference was made to Governor Russell.

Secretary W. S. Hyams then read the call for the convention and called the roll of counties and the delegates sent forward their credentials. All the counties except three were said to be represented.

The following committee on credentials was then announced: Spencer Blackburn, of Ashe, J. E. Dobson, of Wayne, W. E. Clark, of Newbern, J. T. Thornburg, of Randolph, B. N. Bridges, of Guilford, R. B. Russell, of Robeson, George L. Patterson, of Cabarrus, C. J. Harris, of Jackson.

On motion the convention then took a recess until 3 o'clock.

Immediately after the body adjourned the committee on credentials met. There are only two contests, one from Union county and one from Cumberland.

Col. James Boyd was expected but has not arrived.

AFTERNOON.

At 3 o'clock the delegates again assembled, but Oscar Spears announced that the hour for recess had been extended from 3 to 4 o'clock by order of the executive committee. There were loud calls for Spears then, but he stated that it was his purpose to reserve his remarks until he could get a larger audience.

Mr. French, of Wilmington, suggested that the executive committee had no right to extend the hour, but no one else seemed to question their authority and the delegates settled down to swelter away another hour.

The committee on credentials decided to report in favor of the contesting delegation from Fayetteville headed by Colonel Slocum against Waddell, the one-legged colored politician. Waddell has been a Russell man and the action of the committee is said to have been governed by this fact. In the instance of the Union county wrangle it was agreed to seat both delegations with half a vote each.

The report of the committee in the Cumberland contest will be bitterly fought on the floor of the convention this evening.

RUSS FOR COUNTY CLERK.

The Democratic primaries in Wake county will be held shortly by order of the Executive Committee, which will announce the date on Saturday. Mayor William Russ is a candidate for the nomination for Clerk of the Court, and his many friends are pushing his name to the front. There is no man more popular in his party than is Mayor Russ, and it promises to be a hot campaign if he is nominated by the Democratic primaries. Mayor Russ is probably as well known throughout the county as is any man. He is popular in all sections and will have many friends rallying to his support.

COLONEL BURGWIN'S SURPRISE.

This morning the Second Regiment pitched camp about six miles from this city. It had been announced that the companies would go to Milburnie and this morning there were about fifty lemonade stands established at that place. The milk-shake and lemonade makers were badly fooled. This surprise had been arranged by Colonel Burgwin in order that the regiment might be undisturbed by the traffic-makers.

MEN WHO ARE HERE

A Few Incidents Recalled by Visitors.

Mr. Morrison H. H. Caldwell, of Concord the Populist nominee for Congress in his district is stopping at the Branson House. Mr. Caldwell is here to attend the meeting of the directors of the State penitentiary and yesterday he paid a visit to Mr. Hal W. Ayer, chairman of the State Populist Executive Committee.

"Look here Ayer," said the Congressional nominee from the Seventh district, "that campaign document you sent out denouncing lawyers is going to give me trouble in my district."

"How is that," asked the chairman with a broad smile that showed that the nominee's profession had been brought to mind.

"Well," said the Cabarrus Congressional aspirant, "the other day as I was standing outside of the convention hall waiting to be escorted in to meet my fate, an old farmer from an adjoining county said to me 'What's your profession?' 'What's my profession?' 'What do I do?' asked I. 'Yes, sar, what's your business, that's what I said,' he repeated. I told him I was a lawyer and then looking me square up in the face says he: 'There's fifty Populist votes in my county you can't get and mine's one of 'em.'"

The chairman and Auditor smiled. The Cabarrus statesman smiled and then paused as if he could see the farmer still standing before him.

"What did you do?" asked Auditor Ayer.

"I asked him, Why? and he told me," said Mr. Caldwell and then he paused again.

The Auditor-Chairman grew impatient. He wondered what trouble he had brought upon his party's nominee and then he asked: "Well, what did he say?"

"Right there's the trouble," continued Mr. Caldwell, "he said the fifty had gotten together and had taken out not to vote for any lawyer for anything except Judge. You bet I began a tall piece of missionary work."

Here the politician closed the conversation. He rushed off to his business, but not until he convinced the Auditor that he had reconvinced the wandering brother.

"Good evening, Judge Adams," was the salute Mayor Russ received from a delegate who stood with four companions in front of the market. The Mayor returned the salutation graciously, and a friendly chat ensued. Finally one delegate politely inquired, "Judge, did you ever get in any little scrapes yourself?" The Mayor said he was once in the ring with the boys, and the delighted delegate then slapped him on the back and swore that he was just the kind of judge the boys wanted, and since the speaker was in a little court scrape now he hoped the Judge would be easy with him. Mayor Russ, thinking the thing had gone far enough, said to the delegate, who had so graciously introduced him, "I am not Judge Adams, but William Russ."

"Oh! yes," exclaimed the loquacious delegate, "excuse me gentlemen, but you have the honor of addressing Governor Russell." This time the Mayor lost not a moment in correcting the mistake and left the blundering introducer scratching his head and muttering, "Well, I swear boys, I didn't think one drink would have so much effect on a fellow."

There were two men seated in the Yarrowhouse lobby this morning talking of the convention and the complexion of the delegates. The conversation was dragging when a tall, seven-foot mountaineer with wild and wavy western locks, banging down his back, entered the door and carefully scanned the crowded lobby.

"Who's that?" asked the younger of the two, who is here attending his first convention.

"That man," said the other, who, by the way, has not missed a Republican State Convention for twenty years, "that man is one of the brainiest politicians in the west. In him the leaders have confidence and the ablest ask his good counsel. He is the pride of Madison county, and every small boy in Marshall has to look up to him. He is not a conceded man and yet in a way he looks down on even his best friends. Yes, he is bright fellow. Ask him who he is and if you gain his confidence you will learn that he is none other than Prichard's manager, a board of strategy all by himself. He is without doubt what I call a big man."

"Well, who is he?" again queried the younger politician.

"John A. Hendricks, of Marshall, Madison county, N. C., one of the—" and there the conversation ended. Mr. Hendricks had been attracted to the scene by the familiar voice of a distinguished friend calling out the name of a prominent manager of a United States Senator and with his long forefinger of his right hand he beckoned to the old friend to come to him.

"This is a pleasant surprise to me," said a well known traveling man at the Carrollton this morning. "When I came to Raleigh yesterday a porter called to me and took my baggage in hand. He brought me here, the clerk gave a cool room, my sample cases were well handled and placed in a good room for displaying, and since breakfast I feel once more like a well-bred, well-fed gentleman. The other day I was down east and heard a friend speak of Judd Carroll, with whom we used to travel, and he told me Judd was going to open up a hotel in Raleigh, and hoped to make it pleasant and homelike for we homeless fellows. I'm glad to be here. It's a nice place and I will appreciate it if you will come up in my room and see the coolest hot number in the country."
