WANTS HIS HEAD CUT OFF.

Assassin of the Empress Talks About His Crime.

Through the assistance of B. H. Ridgely, United States Consul here, I was enabled this afternoon to interview Assasin Lucchesi in the Palais de Justice, says a Geneva correspondent of the Press Publishing Company. He was smiling, effusive garulous and beaming. Lucchesi is small and gaunt, but athletic, with blue eyes, a reddish mustache, dirty brown hair, cut short and unparted. His demeanor suggested an unhinged mind, but his replies indicated clearly his full consciousness of the crime in which he gloried.

"Why did you select the Empress? Why not have killed a real ruler—king or president?" he was asked.

"Destiny placed her in my way. She was here and I struck her. She was one of the oppressors."

READY FOR THE GUILLOTINE. "Would you prefer life imprisonment in Geneva, or death in Austria if you had a choice?"

A look of annoyance passed over his face as he answered with an accompanying motion of cutting off his own head swiftly: "I should prefer the French way."

The Judge asked Lucchesi if he would have murdered King Humbert or Crispien.

"Humbert? Oh, yes, with pleasure, but not Crispien. Crispien is a thief. I take my hat off to thieves. Never murder a thief," he laughed aloud.

FOND OF SMOKING. Even the Judge was scandalized, though he is used to criminals. After a while Lucchesi said: "I asked for cigars. Shall I get them?" "We will see," said the Judge, and ordered him back to prison. His hands were free and he wore his own clothes—jacket and jersey. MAY BE EXTRADITED TO AUSTRIA. It is asserted here that Lucchesi, being a foreigner, may be extradited to Austria, where he will be tried and sentenced to death for his atrocious crime.

WHAT THE TRANSVAAL TREASURY CHEST HELD.

Frequently the statement has been made that when the treasury chest in the Transvaal was opened in 1877 it was found to contain only 12s. 6d. Mr. H. Rider Haggard, the novelist, has corrected this statement. He is almost certain that the sole coin found there was a three-penny bit. He says that the financial situation was so acute that the postmasters had to help themselves to their own salaries in stamps. Mr. Haggard ought to know, for he was one of the officials who took over the treasury chest.—London Financial News.

DEATH OF AN ENGLISH LADY DOCTOR.

Dalziel cables from Bombay: Dr. Elizabeth Phillips, one of three Europeans attacked by the plague within the last few days, has succumbed to the disease. The plague is increasing in the city where 59 deaths have been reported within the past two days, making 27,800 in all. At Hubli about 60 deaths occur daily, and there are 2,269 cases of the plague.

ESSENCE OF MANY NEWSY AND INTERESTING MATTERS.

The London Standard's correspondent describes the humorous exploit of a Paris thief. He was known to have been in one of a block of houses, which were promptly surrounded by the police. They searched every nook and cranny of the roofs in vain. At last a gendarme found the robber's ragged clothes in an attic. He had stripped off everything he had and dressed himself in a suit of good clothes. He then joined the crowd and watched the fun. He is still at liberty.

FIFTY CIGARS IN A LADY'S HAT.

At Harwich yesterday, says the Westminster Gazette, a foreign lady who gave her name as Marie Verber, and an address at Hyde Park mansions, London, was fined £2 14s. 6d for smuggling three pounds of cigars. She was a passenger on a boat from Rotterdam to Harwich, and on being asked to declare whether she had any tobacco, cigars or strits she replied "No." When searched however, the cigars were found in her possession, 50 of them being in the crown of her hat.

ENOCH ARDEN UP-TO-DATE.

An Ostend correspondent gives particulars of a story of the Enoch Arden order. A sailor, named Lucas, having been missing for twenty years, his wife obtained a legal declaration of his death, and remarried. Lucas recently returned to Ostend, and has just succeeded in obtaining the annulment of the declaration before the Tribunal at Bruges. The question of the wife's second marriage has yet to be dealt with.

CASTLES IN THE SAND.

There has been an interesting prize competition at Weymouth, inaugurated by the Mayor. There were three prizes for the best built sand castles, to be erected by not more than four children under the age of 14. From a sympathetic account of the proceedings in the London Daily Mail it appears that the the borough surveyor was the judge. Altogether the scheme was a great success. An extension of the competition is hoped for next year.

THE LADY AND THE LIONS.

Una and her lion is quite thrown into the shade by Madlle. Marguerite and her seven lions—the latest sideshow at the Earl's Court Exhibition. Their graceful young dane performs some wonderful tricks in the cage of her savage pets, who have been excellently trained. The show over, the lady does some skillful skirt dancing in the den, and her animals look on and applaud after their fashion.—Westminster Gazette.

YIDDISH PLAY ABOUT DREYFUS.

The latest theatrical rumor, says the Westminster Gazette, is that a Russian Jew named Racow, at present living in East London, is to try his hand at rebbish playwrighting. He has already won fame as the author of a Yiddish drama dealing with Dreyfus.

A HINT FOR THE HOME LAUNDRESS.

Pipe clay dissolved in the washing water, is an excellent thing for cleaning dirty linen quickly, and without much expenditure of physical labor. It has also the property of improving the color of the clothes.

GREENE IN REVOLUTION.

Great Difficulties and Not Keep Him From Final Victory.

No outline of Greene's campaign can do full justice to him and to his army. There is no great dramatic moment when he arose at once triumphant to the complete victory at which he aimed. From the day when he took command of a beaten army at Charlotte to that other day, two years later, when he rode victorious into Charleston, he had been laboring incessantly with the single purpose of pressing the British back to the sea and setting free the Southern States. The forces under his command had fought four pitched battles. Morgan won at the Cowpens, and Greene was defeated at Guilford and Hobkirks Hill, and had fought a drawn battle at Eutaw. Judged merely by this statement of his battles, one would call him an unsuccessful general, and yet he was steadily victorious. By his detachments under the real and brilliant leadership of Marion, Lee and Sumter, of Williams and Washington and the rest, by his masterly retreats and equally masterly strategy, he held his army together with grim tenacity, and finally and steadily forced the British back before an advance not always apparent, but as resistless as the incoming tide, which seems never to gain and yet ever rises higher and higher. And ever behind and hand in hand with the operations in the field went continually the grinding, harassing work of making and re-making the army, shifting perpetually under the wretched system of short enlistments. In the North, miserable as the arrangements were for the army near Congress, they were supplied by contract, they were in the most settled parts of the country, and the loyalists there were generally few and weak. Greene fought through a country where a large part of the native population was in arms against him, and where it was often difficult to tell friend from foe. He had no contracts, but was obliged to rely on the changeable, well-meaning, but often weak and ill-informed state governments. There was never a moment when he was not short of men, money, ammunition and supplies, and when he was not writing, supplicating, demanding all these things, and but rarely obtaining them. Under these conditions, aided by his singularly gallant and enterprising officers, and by the picked fighting men of the South, whom he gradually gathered around him he came to a complete victory.—Senator Lodge, in Scribner's.

NOVEL WEDDING PROCESSIONS.

Making the Trip to the Church Behind a Traction Engine. Boston Traveller. People on marriage intent frequently single out the day on which the knot is tied in a manner calculated to attract attention, and at times this is done by means of an out-of-the-way procession. Last year, for instance, the villagers of East Weymouth, Kent, had a novel sort of this description. The marriage was celebrated at Holy Trinity church, and the contracting parties, together with their relatives and friends, made the journey to the church in trucks drawn by a traction engine. The trucks and the engine were decorated with flags, flowers and evergreens, and the unique procession attracted crowds of people, the route being thronged. On the conclusion of the ceremony, the newly-married couple and their friends resumed their seats in the trucks, and were conveyed back to Yalding for the wedding breakfast.

One would prefer this mode of locomotion on the wedding day rather than that of another couple, whose marriage took place in Birmingham a few years ago. They adopted the unique plan of going to the church to be married in mourning coaches, but the horses wore white rosettes, as an intimation to the guests that the bride and groom were not taking part in a funeral.

The cycling craze has been responsible for many processions of cyclists in cases where the contracting parties have been ardent lovers of the wheel. In Germany, quite recently, the bride and bridegroom started off on their bicycle for the honeymoon as soon as the knot was tied, and made a journey through Southern Germany and Italy, and returned by a circuitous route to Berlin. On reaching that city they were met by a procession of cyclists, composed of the members of their families and friends, and headed by their respective mothers-in-law—rather a novel use for this most unadorned member of society. Thus escorted, the newly married pair were led in triumph to the door of their new home.

At another wedding the bride and bridesmaid, and a number of friends, made the journey to church and back again, on their bicycles, the machines being tastefully decorated with flowers for the occasion. The party numbered about thirty, and, after the wedding breakfast, escorted the happy pair for a spin in the neighborhood, the novel procession attracting a good deal of attention.

ONLY A REGULAR.

How a Hero of El Caney Saved the Lives of Volunteers.

Blair, a regular, said to be of the Seventeenth, was shot through the groin at El Caney, July 1st. Two wounded men of the Seventy-first New York fell beside him, in worse shape than he. They could not move. He could a little.

A Spanish sharpshooter on their right had the range of them as they lay there, their comrades having pushed on. Although down, the three men were his target.

"Spit!" and one of the bullets cut a lock of hair from Blair's forehead. "Spit!" again and one of the New Yorkers winced as his shoulder was cut.

Blair, for a time could not locate the fellow, but finally discovered him 300 yards distant up a tree. He was incautious and displayed himself in taking aim. Blair had his gun beside him, and with one shot brought him down.

Then, wounded in the groin as he was, he crawled 900 feet to his enemy to get his canteen of water, and 900 feet back, not touching it him self, and poured it down the throats of the two New Yorkers.

He died holding the drink to the lips of one them. His only remark as to his journey was:

"I'm a regular. You fellows have homes."

One of the New Yorkers survived to return home and tell the story of this hero's end.—Chicago Times-Herald.

"William, give me a dollar. I want to go to a clairvoyant."

"Not much; the last time you went you came home with a photograph of your second husband.—Chicago Record.
