GOOD NIGHT, MY LOVE, GOOD NIGHT.

The sun has dipped his golden rim
Beyond the lonely sea;
The soft wind sings its vesper hymn
Upon the drowsy lea.
The wild waves surging murmur cease
Along the yellow sand;
The kiss of twilight lulls to sleep
The eyelids of the land.
Good night, my love, good night!

Mysterious whispers soft and low,
Steal through the rustling leaves;
The dusky bat flies to and fro
About the shady eaves.
The used bells, yon woods among,
Its lonely evening tale;
The streamlet sings its cradle song,
Unto the sleepy vale.
Good night, my love, good night!

The daisy shuts its little eye,
The rose has fallen asleep;
And the blue o'er-larching sky
The stars begin to peep.
Yet twilight waits to see you close
These eyes divinely bright,
For when they shine, full well it knows
It cannot yet be night.
Good night, my love, good night!
— Edwin Waugh.

NIGHT SCHOOL.

If there is one thing which Raleigh needs, and needs badly, it is a night school for boys and girls, whose duties prevent them from attending any day school. This class in Raleigh is constantly increasing. There are now scores, perhaps hundreds, of boys and girls clerking in stores or following other pursuits in this city who ought to be in school, yet this is impossible. Early in life they are confronted with the serious problem of making a living. This is a problem which few of us escape, but these unfortunate boys and girls are huddled in the red-hot vortex of labor, thrust into the fierce struggle for bread, forced to battle amid merciless competition, when they are totally unprepared for the contest. They are thrown upon their own resources before they have any resources. How many instances of this kind come under our observation? (Not a week passes but we do not see some boy or girl, with aching back and aching mind, faint and weary, who lacked that fundamental preparation which was essential for increased responsibilities. A superficial view in the lives of this pitiful class is enough to convince any one that the assertion that "all men are born free and equal" is false and Carlyle's affirmation "every man is the architect of his own circumstances" would come nearer the truth if it read "circumstances or environments are the architect of every man's fortune." Standing in the shady side of life, where a vast majority of this world's inhabitants are crowded, it is hard to escape some feelings toward pessimism, nay more even gloomy, despondent fatalism. How unequal is the race? How handicapped are some of the competitors? How utterly hopeless seems the prospect for them? Are they to blame? Are we governed by blind and merciless fate? All these questions rush into our minds in quick succession.

Within the past three weeks the editor of this paper has had the cruel reality brought vividly before him in several cases, which came under his personal observation. For instance, here is a bright boy. His mother is a widow with no means of support. She is struggling for bread and it is imperative that this son share her struggle. At ten years of age, before he has even a rudimentary education he is placed in a store as errand or cash boy. He is industrious and attentive and, in this capacity, gives his employer satisfaction. When the day's work is done he is tired and seeks rest. While he grows physically his mental being remains at a standstill. Even if he would he does not know how to study and besides he does not realize the importance of cultivating his brain until the stern necessity for its use is thrust upon him. But only a few years elapse before he is too large for an errand or cash boy, yet he is entirely unqualified for a clerk. There is no alternative with his employer. The youth must be dismissed and a boy substituted and the painful process repeated. Examples might be multiplied of boys and girls in other lines of employment who lose their positions, or are debarrred from preferment, simply because they have never had the opportunity of acquiring a simple rudimentary education. Their mental resources are unequal to their responsibilities.

There is scarcely a business man in Raleigh who does not understand the seriousness of the problem. A good night school is the only solution in any way equal to the demands. A prominent merchant remarked to us last night when the subject of a night school was mentioned that he had boys in his employ whose tuition he would gladly pay if they could have the opportunity of attending. Of course, there are many who would not avail themselves of these opportunities but there are others who could be developed into useful citizens if they only had a chance. There are busy men and women in Raleigh who would gladly give part of their time to assisting any one who will start a good practical night school here. This is an opportunity for great good to ourselves, to others and to the city, to be accomplished at our very doors, without having to seek an outlet for all our christianity and humanitarianism in foreign parts.

How can Christianity do its duty, battling with sin when no attempt is made to stop such a prolific source of crime as is the condition in which many people in youth find themselves? Shut out from employment by circumstances, for which they think they are not answerable, dishonesty seems to them almost a necessity and crime loses its hideousness. Under such conditions perhaps virtue is most often bartered. Enforced idleness is the spermator of every tendency towards hatred, envy, immorality, criminality and of every Mephistophelian idea.

Yesterday the Times-Visitor published in full the Governor's message to the legislature. The document made seven columns in small type. This was the first time in North Carolina that an afternoon paper ever printed the biennial message of a Governor to the North Carolina Assembly in full and we not only did this but published it the day it was read.

In speaking of the government of our new colonial territory the Baltimore News very well says, that the most important thing to do is looking after internal permanent improvements, and adds: "The men appointed by our own government to take charge of affairs in Porto Rico have shown a perception of the importance of good roads. These things should strengthen the argument that has constantly been advanced by good-roads advocates, namely, that they are important as a factor in the growth of commerce and in the leading together of communities in the spirit of modern progress."

Impartiality in an editor's opinions and views is a difficult goal to attain but we must confess that the editor of the Durham Herald shows as little bias in his editorial expressions as any editor in the State.

A GOOD PLAN.

Governor Roosevelt has established a code of rules to govern his consideration and determination of applications for pardons and commutations of sentence. He says he will not exercise executive clemency in behalf of a man who has been convicted of murdering or abusing his wife, nor will he pardon any habitual criminal. His mercy will be shown only to those whose sentences seem to have been too severe or whose commission of a crime was the result of influence.

A disastrous storm is prevailing on the English coast and in the Bay of Biscay. Many lives are reported lost and much shipping damaged and destroyed.

A bishop of the Greek church in Alaska reports to President McKinley that the United States' manner of operating in that portion of its domain is reducing the native population to beggary and starvation. Why not work some of the humanity theory in Alaska?

The weather man is making it warm for that cold wave.

Governor Roosevelt of New York, did a sensible thing when he determined not to grant a pardon to a wife murderer or a confirmed criminal. This resolution should be adopted by other States' chief executive.

Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, of Russia, cousin of the Czar, after a brief visit in New York, and being interviewed and entertained there visiting the wretched abode of his countrymen on Green street, will carry away with him rather confused impressions of magnificence and poverty, of transplanted Russian traditions and American customs.

Mr. Editor, mark my prediction. The "deep waters you have discovered are telling today on the hitherto drifting President. The voices of labor and of agriculture, sounding in unison, are giving him the needed warning of rocks ahead." He will surprise you soon by his order, "Bout ship, for he has an acute ear, fortunately—an essential point in a pilot. All goes well, and the republic is once more to learn that it is the plain, common people that save a State—the Triumphant Democracy—not the narrow classes.

So says Mr. Andrew Carnegie in a letter to the New York Times, in which he discusses the expansion policy.

The warm weather following the cold wave is well calculated to cause an increase of grippe, and it is well to guard against it, by a retention of overcoat and overshoes. The warm sun rays drawing the frost from the earth makes a dampness that breeds grippe bacillus. Be on your guard and retain your grip on the overcoat and shoes.

The Governor of Pennsylvania boldly asserts in his message to the legislature, that the public funds of the State have been deposited in banks for political purposes, whereby the people of the State have grievously suffered. And still that very legislature is now attempting to return to the United States Senate a man under indictment for the crime the Governor says some one is guilty of. If he is innocent the indictments should have no weight but this should be first determined.

ONE EXAMPLE.

The recommendation of the Governor in reference to one or more Houses of Reformation for youthful criminals is one which should commend itself to the thoughtful consideration of the General Assembly. There is now in Wake county Jail a little fellow about 13 years old in a crowded compartment where there are some twenty or more prisoners, two of whom are charged with murder.

GLORIOUS NEWS.

Come, from Dr. B. B. Cargile, of Washin, I. T. He writes: "Four boxes of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. A Terrible sore would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help, but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, scrofula, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength, only 50 cents. Sold by all druggists, guaranteed.
