BOYS NEEDED-WHAT KIND?

The greatest problem of every genera tion has been how to properly train the boys, and the problem, we are often tempted to believe, is further from solution today than it has been at times in In every avocation of life there is a demand for energetic, faithful, conscientions and intelligent youths They can always find work of some kind if they will be satisfied with small be ginnings, take a keen interest in whatever they undertake, and realize that any honorable measures which promote the interests of their employer or employers assist them and are stepping stones to something better.

Whether the worful disregard of these rudiments of success by many youths of today is due to heredity and environment or both is a disputed question, but the fact that such a state exists must be patent to every business man. How many business men have asked an emplaye to perform some task and been met with the reply: "Here is Jake, he isn't doing anything, why can't he de that?" Perhaps you have asked a clerk to look up something for you and have been met with so many nanseating and frivilous questions that you would really have saved time by doing it yourself. Some employes really seem to take a pe culiar pleasure, regard it as a mark of special vigilance, if they can trot to the head of the concern with every little unpleasant incident, more or less of which will arise in every business, and pour them out to a man whose mind is almatters claiming his attention, and they never seem to realize that he has any thing to do except to hear their little

We are not writing in a fault finding strain, and are speaking almost as much from observation as from experience. but the fact is more and more deeply impressed upon us daily that the need of today in the business world is the same that has existed from the beginning of human conscionsness, namely, an in telligent and honest interest on the part of the employed for the employer.

The manifestation of such an interest may be justified on the grounds of pure if necessary. Whether just to be born absolutely defity and obligation, and the early environment of hundreds of them is not conduelve to overcoming this inherited defi-Their motto for life seems to be "Do just as little as possible and don't let any man make you do a thing that you are not paid to do," if indeed their ideal is not "Try to get a living without in many instances they are not blame-Some twelve months since the editor of this paper very reluctantly eigh and, after expressing regrets at his errand, told him that for the third than crooked in pecuniary transactions, centleman was very politely informed we regarded the matter a little more seriously and while we would like to assist the boy any way possible. after one more trial the boy was ship-This is one example of many

But to be plain our object is simply to enter an explanation for why The Times Visitor was very late reaching some of our host of subscribers last night. A Sunday-school pienic was given out of own and all of our dozen or more carriers were told that they could go, pro vided they gave notice the day before o that arrangements could be made about their routes. This most of them did and, although it occasioned considerable additional work in the office, yet we were glad for the boys to have a day off and the extra trouble was really a pleas-However, some of the carriers' abence was manifest only by their failure appear or provide any substitute, and ifter a patient wait and a vain search the manager of the paper had to trudge the streets until nearly nine o'clock at night before dinner could be even considered, and perhaps that is why you did not get your paper on time. It is hard necessary to say that if you live on such a boy's route the face of a new carrier will greet you in future and if

Sunday school picnics are a blessing, but what a pity it is that the young nen and boys who attend these schools annot learn something of faithfulness fair dealing, moral obligation, straight business methods and honesty in the daily walks of life. Why is it that they annot realize that their faithful teachers and leader could pever exercise he great influence now possessed were not for the fact that their character s founded on the work inviolable, that they are men that swear to their own as good as their bond? Do attach too much importance lace and silks rills of Christianity without starting with the strong bleaching and homespun of common honesty? Who can say that he seet often called Hard Shell Baptist wrong when it depicts a plighted word, a broken bond and unpaid debt as more hieuous crime before God and nan than a victory of Baccus over Minerva, an occasional subjection of the will to an overpowering appetite or pas sion? The world today needs a genuine revival of old time up hill down hill. rugged, unswerving honesty and the parents, as well as the Sunday school teacher, must lay the foundation for it by teaching the boys that their first duty to themselves, if they would amount to anything in any field of enor, is to be honest and earnest, and many other things shall be added unto them, but so long as they are placonsequently their own interests) certainly will not receive equality of our social system, that everybody depends on "partis" and being in the "ring," and whimper that they cannot get anything to do.
