THE PRAYERS.

A man fell on his knees; "God, give me grace," he prayed; "God, bless mine enemies; And, O, if I have strayed Out of the rightful way, I pray thee, so me right— God guide my steps by day And guard my sleep at night. I ask no great reward For coins that I have thrown Into the blind, O Lord, Nor graven I have shown To those who cried for bread! Lord, let me give for love, For love of men instead, Or for rewards above." Another knelt and prayed: "Into the Lord on high; God bless me! I have made A beggar cease to sigh; I gave him alms today; As Thou, O Lord, didst see: Therefore, prepare, I pray, A home above for me. Lord, Thou hast seen how I Have kept aloof from sin, And therefore when I die, I pray Thee, take me in; I neither steal nor cheat. As Thou dost know, O Lord; So let a favored saint Above be my reward." One prayer was heard above. And why one, do ye say? One man did well for love, One for a crown some day. One thought of his reward, Love was the other's word— Which of them pleased the Lord, Which of the twain was heard?—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

ODD FELLOW ITEMS

Just a Few Pickings Taken From Here and There.

There were quite a number of the brethren here attending the Fair.

The Grand Secretary returned Thursday morning from a successful trip as far as the Fair.

We were glad to meet Brother N. Constantine, of Tarboro, who reports Edgewood Lodge flourishing.

Brother E. N. Lee, the able representative of Golden Link Lodge, at Durham, was a pleasant caller yesterday.

Scotland Neck Lodge will be ready to induce its first club of ten into the Order soon.

Lenoir Lodge and Newton one, took in clubs this week and Lenoir expects its second club soon.

The club plan alone has brought in close on to one thousand new members since the first of June. The nine hundred mark is passed already.

This is a very busy season among all lodges, and it prevents some from doing all that they would like to do for the Order, but much is being done notwithstanding.

The Grand Master writes, under date of October 17th: "Already have received by the club plan since June 1st, nine hundred and eighteen, besides others in new lodges, and regular initiation at least twelve hundred additions. What has become of the granddies, grandies, and faint-hearted now?"

The compiler of the columns was among the first to advocate the organization of degree staffs for the purpose of improving the clumsy work in conducting the degrees. He worked in the first one that was organized in the State. The improvement all over the State was simply wonderful, and good to the Order still results from it, but only in a feeble way. The trained and proficient staff is a power for good, in one or two phases, but it fails in some others. So far as North Carolina is concerned, in our humble opinion, the staffs of the staff are numbered. They are expensive, and men of business can not give the time necessary to keep up the proficiency. There is not one in good training in the State now, although several lodges pick up a staff among their trained members and do fairly good work occasionally. But while a few members have been benefited by learning the work and helping it along, how about the masses? How about the Lodge member who never got on the staff? We often complain of its non-existence, but have we ever thought about the reason they are so?

We believe that our remedy lies in the preparation of all the members to take some part in the work. In some States it is required of a member to know every part in one degree before he attempts to advance to another. Consequently where he has completed his task he is ready for use and can be used whenever needed. If the novice knows this is required he applies himself diligently and soon becomes proficient. Where this is done you can always do good work without keeping a degree staff.
