PROVED COWARDS

British Hold Suffolk Regiment Responsible

FOR COLESBURG DISASTER

Jaubert Again Reported Injured—Rumor That British Cruiser Fired on a Dutch Ship.

Cape Town, Jan. 9. Despatches from Pretoria dated January 6th say Jaubert has complained that the British have been running more trains to the hospital camp at Lady-smith than was stipulated in their agreement. General White has denied that these trains have exceeded the number stipulated.

London, Jan. 9. A dispatch from the Glasgow Mail states positively that Jaubert has been seriously injured. The horse was shot from under him, and falling the animal rolled over him, killing him so severely that he will be unable to take further active part in the war. This report has no official confirmation.

The Manchester Guardian attributes the disaster to the British force which has long been due to the evacuation of the Suffolk regiment. This allegation is confirmed by a despatch received by the London News Agency saying that the Suffolk soldiers were seen to withdraw and most of them flew the job.

The remaining, including the 2nd and 3rd, overwhelmed by a strong force of Boers, and either slain or captured.

BRITISH FLEE AT DEBUI

London, Jan. 9. It is reported that a despatch from Amsterdam dated January 8th reports that the Dutch army has retreated from Debui, near Delagoa Bay, and a Dutch officer was killed.

BOERS RECALLED

London, Jan. 9. The Cape Mail reports from Cape Town that the Boers have been recalled from the Delagoa Bay region, and that they are being sent to the interior.
