The slight depression on the South Atlantic coast has been forced off into the Ocean, and the probabilities are for clearing weather in the east. Slight depressions exist in the extreme northwest, too far off, however, to influence conditions in the east by Monday.

PICKED MR LUMSDEN'S POCKET

His Railway Clerk Commission Found in a Strawberry Patch

Mr. Robert Lumsden, the efficient railway mail clerk at the Union station, attended the celebration at Charlotte this week. In his inside vest pocket he carried his commission as railway clerk which was good for transportation on the train. Hence a most important document. It was in a case like a pocket book. When Mr. Lumsden went to the depot in Charlotte to return his commission, case and all, was gone. His vest was partly undisturbed. He returned to Raleigh rather a blue man for he had always thought that the man sharp enough to pick his pocket did not live. However, Mr. Lumsden's spirits revived this morning when he received a letter from a man living near Charlotte saying that his little son had found in his strawberry patch, among some other articles evidently discarded by thieves as worthless, a commission bearing his name, and that thinking perhaps it might be of some value to Mr. Lumsden he turned it over to the chief of police of Charlotte. Mr. Lumsden says he is informed that thirteen empty pocket books were found in an alley in Charlotte where the pick pockets had thrown them after securing the contents.

GREAT EVENT MONDAY MORNING

Eclipse of the Sun the Absorbing Topic

MR. VON HERRMANN'S PREPARATIONS

Have an Early Breakfast so That You May Watch the Advent of the Great Phenomena Totality at 8:49.

Raleigh people should rise early on Monday morning to observe the actions of the sun, the occasion of a total eclipse coming only once in a life time, and this time favoring Raleigh as one of the best localities in the world as a viewing point.

The observations by the various scientific departments of the government will begin at 6 o'clock A. M., and will continue for some time after the sun has left this city in a state of darkness. Citizens generally will be ready to see the first movement behind the shadow, many high-lighters having already made preparations for viewing the observation in superior ways.

The Graded Schools of the city will not open until ten o'clock on Monday morning as the darkness will come just at the time that the little ones would be on their way to school. Later in the day they will be told of the importance of the occasion and the eclipse will be explained thoroughly by the teachers.

Throughout the entire State the eclipse will be seen to some extent, but only in a certain line, on which Raleigh is fortunately located, will the observation be total. The only telescope in this city to be put to practical use on Monday is the property of Col. A. W. Shaffer, and is situated in the observatory built by him several years ago.

Never before in this country has an eclipse been so favorably located. Whoever of the gods at his command Apollo has appointed to look after this temporary obscuring of his glorious face has shown himself a believer in the "greatest good to the greatest number" theory, and Sol will do his "black-face" stunt in the presence of one of the largest and most intelligent multitudes ever present at any one performance.

The "trick of the totality begins on the Pacific Ocean, just west of Mexico, at sunrise, trends due eastward over Mexico, enters the United States very near New Orleans, extends northeastward over Mobile and Montgomery, near Atlanta, over Raleigh, and leaves this country in the region of Norfolk and Cape Henry. It then crosses the Atlantic Ocean and touches Europe at Coimbra, Portugal, takes in Algiers and Northern Africa and terminates near the Red Sea at sunset.

The eclipse may, therefore, be observed in the United States from 7:20 to 9 o'clock (local mean time) in the morning, and in Spain and Africa after 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The United States Naval Observatory staff has erected two stations—one in North Carolina and the other in Georgia. Each of these will be manned by a party of ten or twelve, consisting of astronomers and scientists from the Observatory, and a few favored outsiders.

The fortunate location of the eclipse permits these expeditions to be conducted on the economical plan, and explains the ludicrously small appropriation of $3,000 asked of Congress for the purpose. The convenience and accessibility of the stations explains why such a small amount in proportion to that given in former times will be productive of such successful results if the weather is propitious.

An interview with Professor Brown of the Weather Bureau, is conducive of great encouragement to the amateur photographer who is hankering after a snap shot.

Prof. Brown advises naked eye observations, and proposes of this, speaks regretfully of his experience in the Caroline Islands, where he went to witness the solar eclipse of 1882.

"I got a thorough and a satisfactory view of the eclipse itself," he said, "but by keeping my eyes glued to the spectroscopic all through the time of totality, I lost the effect on the world about me, which is no small part of the spectacle. I assure you. The heavy pall of darkness settles over the earth with an uncanny suddenness; birds seek their nests uttering strange, uneasy cries; cattle start homeward; dew falls, and before you have time to more than realize that what at first seems an impenetrable blackness is a weird green shadow, it is gone, and you rub your eyes, and wonder if you haven't just awakened from some strange dream."

Prof. Burham, of Chicago, also approves of and advises observation made without use of the telescope.

One being approached by a fellow-astronomer of lesser magnitude with a request for advice as to the best instruments to use for observations of the coming eclipse, Prof. Burham replied promptly: "Use the most valuable instrument God ever gave you—your eyes. Watch the effect of the strange phenomena on nature, and learn a lesson in her laws that you'll never forget, sir, never forget."

MR. VON HERRMANN'S PART.

Weather Observer Von Herrmann and his force at the Weather Bureau are preparing for the event, though their observations will be on an entirely different line from those made

APPROVED BY EX-SUPT. RAY.

Think the County Commissioners ought to Use Convicts.

Editors of Times-Visitor: The county officials have been criticized for great deal for having the county convicts to do mechanic work on public buildings, etc. I want to say that I have once been a county official and I always approved of the county convicts doing any and all the public work they were competent to do, and I believe all other intelligent county officials who have the interest of the county at heart will approve the same. I believe that convicts ought to be used to the best advantage so far as county work is concerned, but I do not believe they ought to be used in competition with free labor in any respect.

As all intelligent voters know our county is in debt, and the way to get her out of debt is to have every thing in the way of county improvements done as cheap as possible, and then we will complain at our taxes, and then say the county officials are extravagant and have not the interest of the county at heart. Taxpayers don't complain at right.
