MARCUS DALY DEAD

Made Enormous Fortune Out of Montana Copper Mines.

HIS FIGHT WITH CLARK

And How Clark Got to the Senate. Owned Almost Half the State of Montana.

By Telegraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Marcus Daly, the noted Montana mine owner, died at 7:50 o'clock this morning. He was ill for many weeks at the Hotel Netherland, of Bright's disease. Mr. Daly's family, consisting of his wife, son and three daughters, were at his bedside when the end came. He had in the past year or two tried all the watering places and cures in Europe, but found that none of them gave him any relief.

HIS COPPER STRIKE. Daly was one of the wealthiest mine owners in the world. He made rich strikes in gold and silver in Colorado and Montana, and at last struck the basis of his enormous fortune in the copper mines of Montana. These proved to be the richest in the world. coper to be the richest in the world. Copper is found in few localities, and as if grew scarcer the price went up, and Daly and his partner, W. A. Clark, reaped a rich harvest. After years of copartnership, he and Clark had a quarrel and separated. For several years they have been the bitterest enemies.

They were far the wealthiest men in Montana, and practically owned the State, which was therefore divided into two rival camps

THE SENATORIAL FIGHT.
When Clark ran for the United States Senate, Daly used all his prestige and influence to defeat him. Money flowed like water, newspapers were subsidized and Legislators were bought, and there were charges of bribkers and correction. At least Clark bribery and corruption. At last Clark was elected after a bitter fight, but Daly carried the battle to the United States Senate, and Clark was excluded on account of bribery. But Clark re-signed before the Senate could expel him, and had the Lieutenant Governo: to reappoint him while the Governor, who was a Daly man, was out of the State. Thus Daly, was outwitted and defeated in the contest.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

1. P. M.—Marcus Daly was born in Ireland in 1842, and came to this country while a young man. He went west and became a miner. In the early seventies he was sent from Butte, by J. B. Haggin, of California, to pick up some good mining properties. Daly stumbled across the now famous Anaconda mine, and bought it for $35,000. The mine had been a silver producer, but when the been a silver producer, but when the shaft was sunk deeper, a rich vein of copper was discovered. Daly became superintendent and part owner of the Anaconda and under his management the mine developed wonderfully. He went further and built the town Anneonda and established the greatest copper plant in the world. Daly then built a railroad from Anaconda to Butte, because the Montana Union Railroad charged too high a rate for carrying copper ore. While Daly's fortune grew to enormous proportions, he never forgot that he was a miner himself, and he was always a good friend, to his employes. Daly's tastes were simple and his only extravagance was his passion for blooded horses. His colors are well known on the tracks in the East. HOW THE FUED BEGAN.

Daly was a great fighter in politics and his bitter quarrel with Senator W. A. Clark, of Montana, is well known. This feud began in an ordiuary business rivalry. Clark secured water rights which Daly wanted, and raised the price while the deal was being negotiated. The price was raised from $25,000 to five times that sum. and Daly awore vengeance. Dalv's chance for revenge came in 1888, when chance for revenge came in 1888, when Clark was running for Congress again Tom Carter. In the election every one of Duly's men voter for Carter, and Clark was defeated. The fight has continued relentlessly and found its culmination in Clark's desperate endeavor to wrest the political ascendency of the State from Duly.

Mr. C. M. Busbee Responds to Mr. Foushee's Telegram

Mr. C. M. Busbee, who has just return-ed from a trip to the Eastern part of the State has written the following leter to Mr. H. A. Foushee, the manager of Gen.

Carr's campaign:
Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 12, 1900.
My Dear Sir:—I thank you very cordially for your telegram of November 7th, and for your kind congratulations.

I would have acknowledged it more promptly, but have been absent from home since last Wednesday morning.

I trust and believe that the friends and supporters of both Senatorial aspirants, forgetting their recent family controversy, will now and hereafter be found fighting with equal vigor and enthusiasm the common political foe.

Yours very sincerely,

Bodies Were Badly Mutliated Church Crowded at Both Morn-Whole of Nova Scotian Coast Strewn With Wrecks.

By telegraph to The Times. HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 12,-The bodies of the wreck of the "City of Monticello" are being rapidly washed ashore. Up to this morning, twentysix bodies of thirty-five persons who lost their lives, have been recovered. Gleason Had a Grudge Against The lookouts are patrolling the beaches today, awaiting the sea to give up the dead. The bodies are frightfully battered, showing that in most cases the victims were killed by being washed against rocks on the shore. Of two boat-loads that left the ship, only four people reached the shore talive. Acting Quartermaster Wilson Cook who was saved, says that Friday night the gale blew up, and carried away the forward saloon deck and the starboard paddle box. The ship began to leak and all efforts to steer her failed. On Saturday morning the engines refused to work and the boat began to sin. At 11 o'clock the captain ordered the boats lowered. There were three boats lowered before th ship broke in two and sank. Wil-son Cook, who was in the first boat, says a big wave struck the boat and jammed it on the rock. The next he knew, he found himself on the beach. The shore is strewn with wreckage today. All of the recovered bodies have been removed to a hall near by.

YARMOUTH, N. S., Nov. 11.—The shore of this county for ten miles east and west, is strewn with the wreckage of the hull and cargo of the which. steamer City of Monticello, which foundered Saturday, and 25 bodies of victims of the disaster have been re-covered from the sea, which is still raging with terrific fury. Many peo-ple have assembled at Rockville, near where the first body came ashore, and numerous relatives of members of the erew, who nearly all belonged points on this coast, have arrived to identify the dead. The bodies were arranged in a room in the public hall and Coroner Fuller, who held an inquest, gave an opinion of accidental drowning. All the bodies are terribly battered. The first body was found at daylight, when the zinc life boat, which was supposed by the survivors ed, was discovered on the shore, of the first boat to have been swampyards distant were the bodies of Mr. Eldridge, a passenger: Second Engineer Poole, Mr. Fripp, a traveler for McKee's Sons, of St. John, N. B., and the body of a seaman. All four had life belts around them. At short intervals along the beach 11 more bodies were found, making 15 discovered up to noon today. They had all evidently come ashore in the life boat and were killed on striking the beach, not one escaping. The known death roll has been swelled to 32, by discovering three persons who were mown to have been aboard.

BRIDE IN MEN'S CLOTHES

Young Lady Thus Attired Writes Now She is Married

Last week a young girl came to this city from Durham dressed in men's clothes. She stopped at three places in Raleigh successively, then left the city presumably for Fayetteville. At one of the houses in which she stopped she was offered some women's clothing but said that she preferred the garments that she hed on. She wore an over-coat which reached nearly to the ground and hid her masculine apparel. She had a large felt hat on her head. Her father, who now lives in Durham but formerly resided here, received a letter from her yesterday postmarked West Raleigh, Nov. 10, in which she said that she was married. She gave as her reason for wearing man's diothes tha her garments were locked up to keep her from leaving and that she wore off the first things that she could had. Friends think that her mind

Relatives of the unfortunate young oman are here searching for her. woman are here searching for her. Her mind is temporarily unbalanced, it is said, by a dream she had some time since, and she imagines that her soul is imperiled. Of course there can be no truth in the statement in her letter that she had married in West Raleigh.

ing and Night Services. The Sermon Today. Tall, angular, with a voice that rises and falls and pleads and laughs in quick succession, you cannot help listening to Evangelist George Stewart, no matter what may be your inclination. He sees the funny side of things and the serious side of things too, and mixes laughter and tears all through his sermon. There is no "firstly" or "secondly" or "lastly" in his sermons; they are not mapped out by rote and rule, and he disregards entirely the rules for logical development of his subject. But he talks the plain gospel of common-sense and sterling manhood and illustrates it by any story or anecdote that happens to come into his mind.

Every morning he is to have a service from ten to eleven o'clock-"starts on tick, stops on tick"-and he demanded that every body attend. There will also be the usual services at night. At Saltsbury everything shut up shop at the hour of his morning service.

Mr. Stewart yesterday told all about himself and his family, and said, "When one of my children goes astray, I'm going to quit preaching."

His text yesterday was the 10th verse of the 6th chapter of Phillippians: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all, men, especially them that are of the household of faith." He also read the verses beginning, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Sow disrespect, carciessness, you reap the same your threating and hospitality. the same,; sow liberality and hospitality, the world gives you its best and every door flies open to you. Isn't it marvelous that any man will sow sin when he knows he must reap the wages of sin?

The subject of his morning sermon was "Opportunity." He said God gives ev-ery man an opportunity to do something Register of Deeds has Issued 559 and be somebody. Most of the young men in the country are not worth killing, and most of the young women are only pretty things dressed up to catch somehody Thristianity is the science of man-hood and womanhood. Any boy can be-come somebody if he has the ambition and is willing to pay the price. He told the story of Horace Greeley's rise from a gawky country boy to the leading editor in this country; of Abraham Lincoln's humble beginnings; the story of a North Carolina mountain boy who started out without friends, education or money and is now a prominent citizen of Boston. Then he turned the other side of the picture-and showed the youth who was al-ways waiting for somebody to do something for him, who never makes a success anywhere. A man gets about all the is better to be at work whether you are paid for it or not. It is better to do something for nothing than nothing for The world is full of openings grow into men and women. If any girl of good mind will agree to work to get through college, I'll guarantee to graduate her in the best college in the country, and I've got the money to do it; now show

He told the story of how a poor and friendless girl had worked her way through college, taken all the honors, and become one of the loveliest women he ever knew, "whose influence is as sweet as the aroma from a Marechal Niel rose. You think this is a funny sermon I'm preaching to start off a revival, he said; wemanhood. It's mighty near dead.

Bring your boy and girl to the services. I won't hurt them. I want to ask all you brethren and sisters whose wings are grown and who are ripe for heaven, not to be afraid of me. I'm not going to hurt anything in Raleigh.

The Edenton Street Methodist church, where the services are held, was crowded at both services.

EVENING SERVICE.

There was not an unoccupied sent at the evening service and chairs were used in the aisles and many were standing in the rear of the church. Rev. George Stewart, the evangelist, spoke to the vast crowd. He selected as his text the same as he used in the morning, the subject being, "Opportunity of doing good." discourse consisted of numerous incidents in the lives of his relatives, himself and those with whom he has come in contact in his evangelistic work, These he used as illustrations to point the way

He said that all of us have opportunities for doing good, every one has an opportunity to be great at sometime. He urged that every man be somebody, a positive character. Development is the law of nature, and the first door is at home. Ninety per cent of the infidelity arises from unfaithfulness in the home. If you want to sound a man or woman's Christianity don't ask his preacher but inquire of his clerk or her cook. He gave an instance of a clerk converted by the noble life his employer led. rious in His dealings with His children. Mr. Stewart announced services in the morning from 10 to 11, and at 7:30 in the evening. He urged all to come to the morning service if it was necessary to close their places of business for that hour. He also wanted the school children saying that he had rather his son would just spell a b "ab" and be a Christian man than be reading Homer in hell.

STORE ROBBED

Three Watches Stolen From G. S. Tucker and Company

Saturday night robbers entered the store of Messrs. G. S. Tucker and Company on Martin street and stole three Ingersol watches and some mail in desk. They entered by means of the window in the second story in the rear. After securing the watches they left by means of the back door, and it was found oven Surday morning. The only things disturbed, so far as known, besides th three watches, was the mail in the desk. Fortunately, however, the mail of Satur-day had not been placed on the desk so that they did not secure any consideraamount from that source.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Henry Villard, the railroad magnate, died at his summer home "Ardsley-on-the-Hudson," at midnight. He was sick only a wash. a week. A cold brought on a compli-cation of diseases, NATIVE OF GERMANY.

Villard was born in Germany and educated at the universities there. He came to this country early in life. Soon after arriving here he became the correspondent for several German papers, and later for the New York Herald, which he represented in many of the battles of the Civil War. In 1879 he started Wall Street by booming Western railroad stocks and made in a single year $3,500,000.

In the panie of 1884 the stock fell in price and Villard lost all his wealth. He went to Germany with $200,000, and remained two years. Then he reorganized the Northern Pacific and again lost a fortune in the panic of Next to Jay Gould Villard was the most daring operator in railroad stocks the country has ever known. He completed the Northern Pacific and left on it a huge debt. When the road was completed he took a number of the leading capitalists of the Eastern cities on a trip over the entire sys-tem, wined and dined them, and ended the line by driving a rolden spike in the last rail. This made such an impression on the capitalists that he had no trouble in floating the stock in Wall street.
