Congressman Puts Finger On Air Traffic Growth

Pointing to ten-fold expansion forecast in airplane take-offs and landings by 1950, Congressman Bulwinkle, veteran North Carolina legislator, explains the need for Federal airport zoning. The charts showing air traffic over airway routes, with one landing and one take-off each counted as one unit, indicate 6 million movements in 1942. The projection line estimates 60 million movements by 1950.

By ALFRED L. BULWINKLE, Congressman, North Carolina

The Lea-Bailey Bill now before Congress proposes a nation-wide system for zoning the vicinity of airports so as to regulate the height of structures to the extent necessary to protect the flight approach paths.

Such zoning is as essential to safety in the Air Age as is Federal regulation of obstacles to the navigable waters with which we have long been familiar.

The Lea-Bailey Bill wisely provides that the states and municipalities shall be encouraged to take the initiative in providing for such airport zoning. It provides further that nationwide standards for zoning should be worked out in co-operation between the state, municipal and the Federal authorities.

Finally, it provides that, where necessary as a last resort, the Federal government may step in and itself enforce height regulations.

The question of maintaining reasonably unobstructed approach paths to airports has, as yet, been seriously considered in only isolated cases. Unfortunately, however, there have already occurred fatal accidents due to the wholly unnecessary presence of trees or poles near airport boundaries. Moreover, there have occurred instances of spite-inspired erection of poles and other obstructions directly in the approach paths. A pole, erected out of sheer spite and costing only a few dollars, has actually put out of commission or materially curtailed the use of an airport costing many hundreds of thousands of dollars—not to mention the commercial loss involved in inability of aircraft to use the airport.

Such unreasonable and unnecessary obstacles can hardly be tolerated in the Air Age. The punctuality of the mail, the safety of passengers, the delivery of cargo cannot be jeopardized by such obstacles.

But far more serious is the danger to our military air force. During the present war literally millions upon millions of dollars have been spent in providing a strategic network of airports necessary to the complete mobility of our air forces if our nation is to be properly defended. Unless there is to be reasonable regulation of the structures which can be erected in the vicinity of such airports, the Government's investment in them can be rendered valueless and our air forces can be seriously crippled if not made impotent.

In the case of our navigable waters, the Secretary of War has the most drastic powers for removing obstacles without any compensation whatsoever to the landowners. These drastic powers have been in existence for fifty years and their propriety has never been seriously questioned.

The proposal in the Lea-Bailey Bill is much less drastic. It provides the localities with every opportunity to act upon their own initiative and to deal with the problem locally. And if as a last resort the Federal Government must step in, adequate compensation is provided for. The reasonableness of such a measure should appeal to everyone.

A few years ago one of the great airliners of an airline which had never had an accident took off from an airport from which it had regularly operated for many years. A few seconds after the takeoff it crashed into a high-tension line. The plane, its occupants and its cargo were burned. That high-tension line

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Pay-as-you-go for America's 44,000,000 individual income taxpayers became virtually certain today as the House passed and sped to the Senate a compromise measure providing 75 to 100 per cent abatement of one year's taxes and imposing a 20 per cent withholding levy against the taxable portion of wages and salaries, effective July 1.

Quick passage was expected in the Senate and administration leaders said President Roosevelt would let it become law.

The 256 to 114 House vote relegated to history the bitter party legislative battle of recent years, in which House Republicans supported and Democrats opposed various versions of the Ruml plan to skip an entire year. The bill received the vote of 85 Democrats and 167 Republicans, while 99 Democrats, 12 Republicans and three minor party members opposed it.

Today's action was on a compromise, devised after legislative machinery fell into a four-month stalemate on the Ruml issue. Representative Knutson Republican of Minnesota, described the compromise as "75 per cent of the Ruml plan."

The bill provides: 1. 100 per cent abatement for each taxpayer owing up to $50 in taxes for the one year, 1942 or 1943, in which he had the smallest taxable income.

2. A flat $50 abatement for each person whose abatement year (1942 or 1943) tax bill is between $50 and $66.67.

3. An abatement of 75 percent for all persons with an abatement year bill over $66.67, with the remaining 25 per cent to be paid on March 15, 1945, in addition to current taxes. (Persons in the $50 to $66.67 classification also would pay off their small remaining debt in two such installments.)

FINAL BATTLE A segment of Democrats waged a last ditch battle against the compromise. Representative Ford, Democrat of Rhode Island, declared "This compromise is nothing but the Ruml plan in a new dress," and Representative Disney, Democrat of Oklahoma, saying "this is sorry business."

In the one-hour debate, Chairman Doughton, Democrat of North Carolina, of the tax-framing ways and means committee, was one of the few Democrats to support the compromise, while Republican after Republican spoke for it.

The most immediate effect of the measure will be the withholding levy, under which, one month from today, the government will begin deducting 20 per cent (after family status exemptions) from pay envelopes and salary checks.

The legislation does not excuse taxpayers from payment of the second installment of their tax obligation as shown in returns filed last March. This installment falls due just two weeks hence, on June 15.

For most taxpayers the measure will mean that they will remit more in income taxes during war years than they would have under the present law. The abatement will not show in the taxpayer's history of the average person until his income falls off, be lost to his job, or at death. But pay-as-you-go transfers the million of taxpayers to a system of remitting in one year on the basis of income of the same year, instead of on the previous year's income as at present.

Installments paid before July 1 on the basis of 1942 income will be transferred as a credit in 1943 earnings will begin paying July 1 obligations. Wages and salary the remainder of their 1943 bill through the withholding levy.

Persons with incomes other than wages and salaries must estimate their income for the current year, and continue to pay by quarterly installments. Similarly, persons with wages or salaries above the 20 per cent withholding level will estimate their upper bracket income, and pay quarterly on that part of their obligation above the withholding level.

Next March 15, all taxpayers—as at present—will file their final return on 1943. On this return adjustments will be made for differences between the estimated or withheld tax, and the correct tax reported by the taxpayer.
