WHY SOME AVIATORS

What happens to the minds of fliers who go on stunt sprees, of-ten with fatal results, is explained by Dr. Donald A. Laird, noted psychologist. Read this illumin-ating article in the September 24 issue of Forty years ago Einar Holboell, a Lanish postal clerk who loved children, "sod" the public the idea of using Christmas Seals on holi-day mail to raise funds to help gick children. The 38th annual Christmas seal Sale in this coun-

In the United States last year 118,000 new cases of tuberculosis were reported and 56,000 persons died from tre disease.

Most mothers nowadays are Most mothers nowadays are careful to instruct their sons as well as their daughters in underarm hygiene. But with boys you can't stop with instruction—you will have to see that the deodor-patriots treat women who are accused of having been too friendly with the German invaders.

The women are stripped in public, shorn of their hair and paraded in the streets for all to see and ridicule.

Put these ugly actions down to that something savage still in us which hates ond seeks revenge; personal, emotional revenge. But don't condone it or excuse it as "right." It has nothing to do with justice. It is rotten and uncivilized.

Furthermore, as an added indictment of the bestiality and unfairness of these actions, why—why this particular type of punishment for the French woman, be she sympathizer or harlot? The French men who have been collaborators have been shot as traitors, in some instances, or taken into custody for trial. They have not been paraded naked through the streets. If these French women have sinned against their country or their countrymen—let there given a fair trial, and if ound guity let them be properly sentenced and punished.

Any other less just and civilized behavior brands the French won have so widely and wilfully violafed all human rights and decencies.

GOOD GROOMING ESSENTIAL
Mothers are more and more coming to realize that sons, as well as daughters, need training in basic good grooming and that this training should go far beyond the age old struggle over a clean neck and ears, even to including instruction in the proper use of toilet preparations.

In the matter of facial hygiene it is especially neglectful to allow a boy to establish his own standard of clei nness or to choose thoughtlessly the soap and lotions he uses. And when it comes time r him to shave do not allow his outchy insistence that this is a sighly personal rite to prevent your seeing that he has expert advice as to methods of using the razor and guidance in the selection of soaps, creams and antiseptics.

The advent of shaving so often ushers in a crop of pimples that some immediate connection other than the adolescent speeding up of glandular activity seems likely.

"Lost" Eight onths in Arctic
This is the story of the "forgotten convoy" revealed this week by the War Shipping Administration. In January, 1943, sir U. S. merchant ships left New York harbor on the tough Murnansk run to deliver supplies to Northern Russia. Battered by air attack, the convoy arrived on March 2. After the cargo was undeathed the crew settled down to in a small Russian factory town convoy. They waited for eight months—six months in the constant daylight of summer in the Arctic Circle. Seeking entertainment, the men found an interpreter and got him to arrange dates with Russian girls for the two dances held there each week. Later, some of the seamen, having learned a smattering if Russian, hitch-hiked around the courty of the seamen, having learned a smattering if Russian, hitch-hiked around the courty of the seamen, having learned a smattering if Russian, hitch-hiked around the courty of the seamen, having learned a smattering if Russian, hitch-hiked around the courty of the seamen, having learned a smattering if Russian, hitch-hiked around the courty of the seamen having the forgotten convoy." ## The Farmer and War Bonds

by Mr. A. S. Goss Master of the National Grange

WE FREQUENTLY hear farm-ers ruise the question as to whether or not they should buy War Bonds as long as they are in debt. The answer to this question should depend in large measure upon the nature of the debt and whether or not it is current. If part of it is pist due, and the borrower expects to experience difficulty in meeting past due payments, he debt. The answer to this question meeting past due payments, he probably should bring his debt into probably should bring his debt into current position before investing in Bonds. If, however, his payments are current, there seems to be no reason why farmers should not buy as many Bonds as they are able. Most individual investors in government Bonds are carrying debt in one form or another, at rates higher than the Bonds will yield. This is as it should be if the purchaser is in an earning position which permits the accumulation of some surplus, for we all owe it to our government to do our utmost in the financing of the war, even though the trans-we all owe it to our government to do our utmost in the financing of the war, even though the transaction may result in our paying some extra interest on outstanding debts.

When a farmer owes money, he is always concerned as to whether his crops will sell at prices which will enable him to repay his debt. When prices are high it is good business and conservative finance to reduce the debt as rapidly as possible because when prices are low, it takes more crops and more efforts to make the payments.

We should not forget, however, that a government Bond will pay off an equal amount of dollars of debt, no matter whether prices are low. It is, therefore, a sound and conservative practice to buy government Bonds and lay them aside to make payments on existing debts when they fall due. In fact, quite aside from the patriotic appeal, it is good the patriotic appeal, it is good business to buy Bonds rather than make pre-payments on debt, because the time may come when the ready cash is needed and the money tied up in pre-payments cannot be returned. If this money is invested in Bonds, it can be converted into cash to meet any needs which may arise.

If everyone followed the policy f buying no War Bonds until their lebts were paid, few Bonds would

If everyone followed the policy of buying no War Bonds until their debts were paid, few Bonds would be sold to the public. We have an obligation to help finance this war which is vastly more important than the income we may receive on the investment of money in War Bonds.

Farmers are finding it impossi-ble to maintain their machinery and buildings in a satisfactory state of repair. They are finding that they cannot replace worn-out equipment except at excessively high cost.

It would seem to be sound and conservative business practice to lay aside money to make the repairs and replace worn-out equipment when material and machines are again available. No safer place can be found to lay aside money for such purposes than in government Bonds.

Every time we buy a Rond w

Every time we buy a Bond we are not only assisting in financing the war, but we are also doing our bit to prevent that most dreaded economic disaster called inflation. If each one of us would invest as much as we could in government Bonds, the danger of inflation would be greatly reduced.
