 REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

The Christian Motive for Living.
 Lesson for October 29: Psalm 4:5-8; Luke 4:4; John 6:35; Romans 12:1,2; 13:12-14.
 Golden Text: Colossians 3:1.
 Having in mind the golden text as the sum of a Christian's motive for living, let us examine the texts found in the lesson.

The foundation motive should be trust in God—his life should be one of faith in the eternal Goodness, Nerk, in harmony with a text Jesus quoted in vanquishing the tempter, a Christian should seek to know and live by obedience to the word of God.

In Jesus we will find the life of the soul, spiritual sustenance. "Bread is the staff of life," a food universally used. As bread is food for the body, Jesus is food, life, to the soul. Through faith in him we may have spiritual, eternal life.

The motives to live by trust in God, obedience, and faith in Jesus must lead, and will, to the sacrifice of the body. Through the organs of sense man works the will of his heart. His eyes may see the needs of his fellows, ears hear the cry of distress, the tongue may "whisper words of good counsel", his feet take him on errands of good, and his hands lovingly minister.

And the consecration of these makes a "living sacrifice." Let the Christian be ready to die for his Lord rather than be untrue. But he is called first to live for Jesus. Doing this, and realizing that the "night is far spent," his consuming motive will be to put off "the works of darkness" all evil, and "walk" and live daily as putting on "the Lord Jesus."

ABOVE THE HULLA BALOO

By LYTLE HULL

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!

Mary: "George! George! the barn is on fire! I can't see any blaze — just smoke coming out of the roof. Where is that fire extinguisher?"

George: "I think it's in the cellar near the furnace. Bring it over to the barn while I hook the hose up to the fire hydrant!"

George rushes out, finds the fire hose but takes two minutes to locate the "key" to turn on the fire hydrant. Hooks up hose and runs with nozzle to a ladder leading to hayloft. Rushes back and tries to turn on hydrant. It has not been turned on for five years and had rusted somewhere down below. George put all his weight on the key and finally something gave—but it was the wrong "thing", and instead of running through the hose, water just shot up in the air in a geyser. It didn't require very deep thought to realize that this "sure fire" protection was useless—until mended.

Mary had not yet appeared with the fire extinguisher so George rushes to the house just as Mary emerges with it. He starts to tell her what he thinks of all women in general and of her in particular—but she floors him with the news that she finally "got through" to the fire house in the village and George had to realize that this was the only effective thing done so far. He rushes to barn, climbs ladder and—holding his breath—sticks his head above the floor level of the loft. The loft is full of smoke, as no ventilation had ever been provided, so George backs down, moves a ladder against the outside of the building and opens hayloft door. The draft causes smouldering hay to ignite. George turns the fire extinguisher upside down, opens the cock—and nothing happens. The poor old extinguisher had gone dry years ago.

So by the time the volunteer fire fighters are assembled and arrive, the upper part of the barn is a seething mass of flames, and George and Mary have lost their winter hay, a lot of grain, the harness, the milk cow and all manner of essential odds and ends. The horses luckily were turned out for over the week-end. There was no insurance.

And this is what usually happens. No one ever has time for a fire drill or even to make an inspection of the fire fighting apparatus every six months or so. George found out later that the horse would have burst anyhow because it had hung on a nail for four or five years and become badly "creased." It developed later that George had cured the hay carefully before storing it, but as the roof was in bad repair and as leaks had developed every once in a while—the conclusion was that water had leaked down into the hay—and that lack of ventilation had created a condition favorable to "internal combustion." George and Mary are working for someone else now and the bank owns the farm.

Forty thousand farm buildings burned last year, with a loss of 3,500 human lives. The causes were many and most of them accountable to neglect. Among the outstanding causes were:

Defective heating systems.
 Defective electrical wiring.
 Inflammable roofing.
 Lightning where there were no rods.
 Internal combustion in hay.
 Rubbish.
 Storing gasoline.
 Smoking.

Successful Parenthood

BY MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
 Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

AS WE DO TO "THE LEAST OF THESE"
 A little perspective is always needed for self-evaluation. So for the moment put your children out of your mind, and ask yourself, "If I were a child would I like myself as a parent?"

For example, when you were little didn't you enjoy most those groups who obviously liked children, not just you yourself because you meant something special to them? The British tell us that the most engaging thing about our soldiers is their genuine fondness for youngsters. It's a trait Americans have to a marked degree. If you lack it, however, it doesn't necessarily make you a Monty Woolley. But if you are a parent it would be well to cultivate a liking for children, in general if only for the added warmth this will contribute to your love for your own family.

Now few of us are equally attracted to all ages of children. You, for instance, may adore babies, but you may be squeamish about rough and tumble school children or stand-offish with the teens. Or you may actually recoil from infants and be endlessly attracted by bumptious eight-year-olds. All right, face the fact of your natural preference in types and ages of children, but resolve that you won't let it make any difference in your relations with your growing family. Too many mothers who take wonderful care of their babies seem almost to become antagonistic when the child is old enough to be a person in his own right. So resolve further to find the most rewarding relationship for every stage of your child's growth. There will be lovely stretches of easy companionship, then times when you seem as far apart as the poles. That is one of many reasons why parents must keep their love flowing steadily to their children, for the times when they seem to reject it are the very times when they need it most.

But just as a heart open to all children you meet makes you a person children like and trust, so compassion for children the world over adds to your stature and usefulness as a citizen.

The plight of children in many countries has grown worse year by year as mortal danger has been followed by malnutrition and disease. Yet in this country our children have actually benefited during these tragic years through our awakened sense of responsibility to all children. We are better parents because we have learned the truth of the teaching that (to paraphrase the Bible text) as we do to "the least of these" so we do to the Creator of us all. And we are a stronger and better people because we have accepted the responsibility for bringing a happier, safer childhood to the world's children not just those fortunate enough to be born in the U.S.A.

Revenue's Rolling In—
 From Manteo to Murphy

"Well, colonel, I see that the beer industry paid considerably over $8,000,000 taxes in the state last fiscal year," Abner Aiken said to Colonel Bain when he was in town recently.

Colonel Bain's the beer committee's state director, you know.

"Big money, I call it," he went on. "Legitimate revenue that we should see is protected. And I, for one, am glad to see you protectin' it."

"Your self-regulation program, backed as it is by just about all the beer retailers, is a great idea. "Clean people, conductin' business in a clean way—that's what appeals to Tarheel folks. Power to you, colonel! And power to you postwar, too—when we'll really need this tax money!"

From where I sit, Abner spoke mighty good sense. What's more, I believe all you taxpayers from Manteo to Murphy—t just the way I do about it, t.
