LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS

This is part of a letter received by Mrs. Robert Lee Watts, from her brother who is in the Navy, just after the death of our President, which indicated that the service men think of Roosevelt.

I am O.K. you know I don't write much, it hurt me when Roosevelt died, for he was all for the service man, he loved the Navy, and of course the Army. He died a soldier, and a sailor for his country just as the sailors die on the high seas and the soldiers on the battle field. We will fight on till what he planned for us is won.

MAJ. GEN. UHL WARNS AGAINST "PW" PRACTICE

ATLANTA, Ga.—Major General Frederick E. Uhl, Commanding General, Fourth Service Command, today warned high school students and other youngsters against the practice of marking "PW" on their clothing as a prank.

"This is an extremely dangerous practice," General Uhl asserted. "Military personnel, believing them to be prisoners of war, may shoot them if they do not halt when ordered to do so."

"This practice also hampers apprehension of escaped prisoners of war."

This Man Bains and His Six Years Work

"I see by the paper that North Carolina's beer industry is observing the sixth anniversary of its Self-Regulation program," Bill Webster remarked the other day. "The way those fellows have kept their business on a high plane is sensible and something to be proud of."

"True words, Bill," chimed in Officer Stebbins. "Colonel Bal. their state director, has certainly shown the beer dealers how to cooperate for their own good as well as the public's. And believe me, they are right with him. I know. The public's wish him, too."

That's just what lots of folks are saying. North Carolinians realize that the $6,000,000 of revenue the beer industry pays to the state every year is a big help. We also appreciate the way the beer industry does business. The beer industry is a good citizen.
