Successful Parenthood

STRIVE FOR COMMON WELL BEING

Most of us agree that a spirit of co-operation is what is most needed to make family life more harmonious, as well as to make the family an effective training unit for citizenship. But just what do we mean by cooperation? One of the dictionary definitions reads "Collective action in the pursuit of common well being." But in actual practice in the home most of us act on the definition once given by an employer to a new assistant. The young man at the end of a trying day had made so bold as to explain that he was doing his best to cooperate. To which the older man belittled in reply, "Young man, my definition of cooperation is for you to do exactly what I tell you to do, and do it quick!"

Of course, as parents we must prepare our boys and girls for just such situations as this young employee was up against in the person of a domineering executive for that matter, there are plenty of situations in life where the safety of great numbers depends upon rigid discipline and exact obedience. But strangely enough, potent as habit is in every other orbit of character formation, the habit of instant obedience to parents does not, as a rule, breed obedience to authority in later life, even if that end were in itself always desirable. For some has been tyrannized over at home is going to take out his resentment on some other person or institution, or just on life in general.

So let's go back to the dictionary meaning for the kind of cooperation we seek as parents. And let's begin when our children are babies to set them an example of "striving for the common well being" of the family. To be sure all this is complicated by the fact that the instinct of self preservation makes thinking of the rights of others a decidedly acquired trait. Fortunately this is offset by the baby's equally instinctive desire to win the approval of those about him. But from his extremely limited vantage point in the cradle, the infant has only one way of learning how to please us, and that is to imitate our attitudes.

I wonder if this isn't why you rarely find a girl being a "lone wolf" in the family, while the role is fairly common to boys. Girls, from babyhood, see their mothers exerting most of their energies in caring for the family so it is natural for them to grow up with a group. But boys, until they are old enough to appreciate importance of money in the scheme of things, are apt to see their fathers as a little outside the family circle. Today, of course, this is only too true in an actual sense. But even fathers who have stayed with their families are too often lacking in understanding of the child's point of view, which mothers usually supply. The child has heard his mother, divided in her loyalties, explain, "But son, your father doesn't quite understand how things are—you see, he's so busy. Wouldn't it be more logical for fathers to have to explain mothers to small boys? Why wait until manhood to share the camaraderie expressed in the phrase, "After all, son, your mother is a woman—she wouldn't quite understand!"

Seriously, though, if fathers would fit themselves into the warp and woof of the child's everyday existence with the same casualness that mothers do, the tapestry of family life would have a pattern of mutual helpfulness which would be repeated in the child's character.

GERMAN PRISONERS TO WEAR WORN CLOTHING

ATLANTA, Ga. — German prisoners of war in the southeast will, in the future, wear repaired clothing formerly worn by American fighting men in training, says an order issued today by Major General Frederick E. Uhl, commanding general, Fourth Service Command. The move is part of the clothing reclamation program. The order specifies that German prisoners will be issued "Class X" clothing, garments previously used by U. S. troops as work clothes or for actual combat training. American soldiers do not wear "Class X" clothing off a military reservation.

G. B. "Joe" Cloninger, Route 2, Bessemer City, near Pasour Mountain, believes in having a variety of pasture available for his cows to produce milk economically. As a result of a farm plan worked out with the Soil Conservation Service program, he plans to develop permanent pasture and temporary grazing corps for as near year round grazing as possible. From a mixture of small grain and rye grass sown last fall his cows are still getting excellent grazing and will continue to do so when turned on permanent pasture sod. "Joe" believes in the liberal use of lime and basic slag in feeding his grazing crops for best results. He plans to sow six acres of permanent pasture this fall for a recommended grass mixture.

The growing of lima beans in North Florida was originated by Seaboard Railway agricultural agents.

Terrace lines were staked recently, to be built by the county terracing units and by farm equipment, on the following farms: R. U. and A. C. Pasour, Route 1, Dallas; Woodrow Carpenter, O. V. McSwain, Carl Carpenter, R. F. Davis, W. C. Davis and L. T. Wyant, all RFD Bessemer City.

L. E. Southards, North Belmont is following his sawmilling operation with pulpwood cutting of tops and other smaller trees, suitable for this material. This practice completely utilizes wood that would otherwise rot on the ground and be wasted. He plans to ship a car per week.

Alfalfa is becoming increasingly popular throughout the country as a permanent hay crop on better land. Excellent yields and stands have been realized where proper fertilization and liming and seed bed preparation have been followed. Farmers planning on seeding alfalfa this fall should take soil samples for fertilizing and liming requirements and plan to turn under a legume crop in advance to seed bed preparation and early seeding. Preparation of a good seed bed is most important. Due to heavy demand on seed, orders should be placed now with your local seed dealer. Soil samples for analysis have been received for the following forms, in preparation for seeding this fall: Guy Harrelson, Route 1, of Crouse; H. C. and W. M. Carpenter, Route 1, Bessemer City; E. R. Seil, Route 2, Bessemer City; Sonny Man McCory, Route 3, of Gastonia; C. O. Carpenter, Route 4, Lincolnton, and Carl Carpenter Route 2, Bessemer City.

Rehabilitation of the pineapple industry, which died out in Florida's lower East Coast during the great boom, was first undertaken by Seaboard Railway agricultural agents.

A New "House of Magic" for Postwar America

"...one of the strongest guarantees of progress and world peace is continuous scientific preparedness through industrial research."

"General Electric has approved plans for a new $8,000,000 Research Laboratory. This expenditure has tremendous significance. Scientific research has contributed much to our progress as a nation. "Many things have been discovered during this war, and we can and must develop them into better things for peacetime. "Today we have 550 research people on our staff. These new facilities will not only give increased outlet for their abilities, but will provide opportunities for new research minds with new talents. "From this new laboratory we think new achievements will come. In the past, G-E research has contributed much to better living in America—not only through new developments in x-ray, electricity, metallurgy, electronics and chemistry, but also through reduced cost and increased efficiency, as in the modern incandescent lamp. "Even more than in the past the laboratory will emphasize research in pure science—continuing and expanding the work begun by Dr. Whitney and the late Dr. Steinmetz forty-five years ago. "To find new facts of the physical world, to extend the limits of knowledge, is a forward step in creating More Goods for More People at Less Cost."

New $8-million-dollar G-E Research Laboratory will be built five miles east of Schenectady, New York, on the Mohawk River. The geographic location offers special advantages for television, high voltage x-ray, and radar research. Buildings with 300,000 square feet of floor space will accommodate an expanded post-war research staff of about 800. Research rooms will be a scientist's paradise of equipment for experiments in chemistry, physics, mechanics, electronics. It is hoped that construction can start in six months.
