MORE ABOUT Police Here Made

rumor began. He further said that the policemen were anxious to be of any help possible to service men or their families and friends, and that personally he was glad to see them on the streets.

During the business meeting of the Club, it was voted unanimously that the police force be made honorary members of the Club.

Rev. L. P. Barnette, pastor of the First Methodist Church, spoke of the need of the person to attend some church. He presented a copy of a poster calling attention to the fact that every church invites the public to its services: He read from LeFourneau's magazine "NOW", the following:

HOW TO KILL YOUR PASTOR

Someone has compiled the following list as a sure method to kill preachers:—

Don't attend the Sunday evening service.
Don't attend the prayer meeting.
Only hear him when "convenient."
Habitually come late.
Sit just inside the door.
Don't give him your attention.
Rush out as soon as the service ends.

Act Cold Show Your Dignity
Never Thank Him for his Message
Never appreciate his efforts.
Tell him what wonderful messages you hear elsewhere.

Criticize him before your children.
Don't make him welcome when he calls.

Criticize him for not calling.
Accuse his wife of trying to run things.

Don't offer to help.
Don't take your Sunday guests to hear him.

Don't inform him when you are ill.
Don't pray for him.
Don't do what he says.

What about going thoughtfully over the list again to see if you are guilty of some of these things.

If you are guilty, the Word says:—"Whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall obtain mercy."—(Proverbs 28:13).

The Club meeting was held at the Dora Park, and a most excellently prepared meal, of which the main dish was fresh water catfish, was served. A large crowd was present, including a number of visitors.

TEN YEARS OF SOCIAL SECURITY

tenth anniversary of the Social Security Act. Through this legislation, which organized labor fought so hard to enact, old-age and unemployment insurance systems have been established for millions of American workers. Provision has likewise been made to assist State public assistance programs for the needy old, the needy blind, and dependent children.

Mrs. Janet Hall Green, manager of the Gastonia Social Security Board field office, reviewed the progress that has been made under these three programs during the last ten years as follows:

Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. By the middle of 1945 more than 72 million persons, or two out of three in our total population aged 14 or over, have built up some credit toward benefits under our Federal system of old-age and survivors insurance. Some 40 million of these are insured, so that, if they should die tomorrow, their families would be eligible to receive monthly benefits, or a lump sum of money. Already well over a million men and women are receiving $20 million in benefit payments each month.

Unemployment Insurance. About 36 million workers are now protected by job insurance under the Federal-State unemployment insurance programs. Millions more are building up wage credits that will later make them eligible for such benefits. By the end of 1944, States' unemployment insurance funds were great enough to have paid 71 out of every 100 workers in covered employment job insurance for the greatest number of weeks provided under State laws.

Public Assistance. Through 1944 the Federal Government had contributed well over $2 1-2 billion to the States to help finance their assistance programs for three groups: the needy old, the needy blind and dependent children. More than 80 percent of this total was distributed to States to help care for elderly people in need. As more and more people are covered by old-age and survivors insurance, this number will decrease over the years.

Out of its experience in administering the act, the Social Security Board has recommended to Congress that the law be expanded to cover sickness, permanent disability and medical care insurance; and extended to include millions not now covered by its provisions.

DON'T MISPLACE THOSE TAGS.

We'd like to shout from the house tops "Beware of tags!" No, that isn't a misprint—we said tags, not dogs. And by tags we mean those little snatches of psychology that are on everyone's tongue. You hear them constantly:

"Jane couldn't help failing in school—she has such an inferiority complex."

Or (and we heard this one in a movie) "If a boy is hard to get along with just ignore him—don't give him any 'unearned attention' and he'll soon come to appreciate his parents."

Now let's see why these tags are dangerous. Each of them might be quite true in a particular case, but applied thoughtlessly to every child who fails in school, to every hostile boy, they become highly misleading.

Take the inferiority complex—it has come to be an alibi for a lot of people who just don't want to exert themselves enough to succeed at their various jobs. True, there are many unfortunate persons weighted down with a sense of inadequacy because they were never given the chance to acquire self-confidence. But as a rule the real sufferers from this feeling of being less worthy than others don't use it as an excuse, but instead keep trying to work out of it.

Judge John F. Perkins of the Boston Juvenile court warns that we are building up in young people a "philosophy of excuse" by blaming all delinquency on parents or on society. Though both have a great deal to answer for, it doesn't do the individual much good to provide him with a ready alibi for all his wrong doings. Children still need to be taught what is right and what is wrong and in so far as they are capable of understanding, given responsibility for their actions. So don't pick out a handy tag to excuse your children's failings—look for the real reason and help them overcome it.

As for ignoring an unfriendly boy, as we heard a psychologist in a recent film advise a step-mother to do, this might work if the boy's hostility were merely a form of showing off. But the boy in question was hurt and frightened because he had lost the sole companionship of his father thru the latter's remarriage. Ignoring him would, in real life if not in the movies, tend to make him feel more lost and unwelcome. Again it is true that unearned attention is responsible for a great many spoiled children. Especially do they need to learn that good behavior earns more attention than deliberate naughtiness. But to apply this stage to a boy who is going through the terrific adjustment of taking second place in his father's life illustrates what we mean by "Beware of tags."

This Week in WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NWNS)—The state department continues to be busy denying peace rumors, but the rumors continue. The most persistent of them is one that Premier Stalin went to the Potsdam conference with the terms which the Japanese were willing to accept.

The Japanese may or may not have launched "peace feelers," but anyone who takes any stock in these unfounded rumors should remember that similar rumors about Germany which were rampant during the African phase of the war in 1942. Our government has made it clear that no terms other than unconditional surrender will be accepted—but that this will not mean enslavement of the Japanese people. Since we know that our government will accept no other "terms" any that may be offered are worthless.

Military leaders here do not expect the Japanese to surrender until some time next year—perhaps not until 1947. They feel certain that a full invasion will be necessary to bring the Japs to their knees.

With the announcements of reconversion to some civilian production in many large manufacturing plants, the OPA is now working to set up a plan for pricing new products so that manufacturers will get a fair profit and consumers won't have to pay too much. Most industries intend to seek higher than pre-war prices and have notified the OPA of that intention. With automobiles, for example, it is estimated that labor costs are now 25 per cent higher than they were in 1941, and that additional costs will be passed on to the consumer.

According to the part of the reconversion price plan which already has been worked out, manufacturers will submit data on increased costs to the OPA and get a new ceiling price set within a few days. The increases permitted will be based on formulas worked out by OPA.

Stating the confidence of the OPA that its plan will provide the basis for a fair profit to industry, James F. Brownlee, deputy administrator for price of the OPA said: "At the same time, the program maintains our guard against the inflation of prices and operating costs which ultimately led to the destruction of so many businesses and jobs after the last war and delayed successful reconversion for two years."

By the end of this year there should be a sizeable amount of merchandise on the market which hasn't been since the war started. Automobiles will, by the end of the year, probably be available on a priority, and other needed heavy home equipment may still be hard to get but we can expect soon to see some refrigerators, washing machines, lawn mowers, and a lot of smaller items. Tires, it is predicted, will probably be available to a card holders around the beginning of 1946.

Thirty dollars a week or 75c an hour for a 40-hour week, is apt to become the legal minimum pay within two years. Bills have been introduced into both houses of congress to amend the Fair Labor Standards act of 1938 to provide for this. The bills seek to set the minimum at 65 cents an hour for a 44-hour week for the first year, 75 cents for a 42-hour week for the second year, and 70 cents for a 40-hour week after that. The present act provides a 40-cent an hour minimum wage. Thus, if the new legislation goes through, which seems quite likely minimum wages will be almost double what they were in 1938.

Vance County 4-H club boys have 103 registered Poland China gilts as a result of a pig club chain begun in 1943 with 6 gilts. They have also sold a large number of pigs to farmers.

The price of rayon staple fiber has been reduced from 60 cents a pound in 1930 to about 24 cents at present. This means keen competition for cotton.

John Arrey, in charge of Extension dairying at State College, says that it's a mistake to try to grow a good permanent pasture on waste land.
