THE FIGHTING MEN, and the rest of the men who go into uniform, are not asking any advice as to what sort of an organization they should join; they can settle that for themselves. But a man in service ought to ask himself how he can best serve his own interests now and in the future; he ought to be sure he is making his own choice and not getting hooked up with something a smart promoter started who may have some other interest besides unselfish devotion to the interest of the serviceman. We do not mean to imply that any of the new groups such as an organization, but only that people should recognize that the organization of servicemen does offer an undoubted opportunity to promoters and that every organization should not resent close scrutiny.

From where we sit it does seem the best bet for the servicemen of this war to join The American Legion. It is true that the young men who form today's armies do not want to be bossed by the men of World War I. But with the comparative size of the armies of the present time and twenty-five years ago, the younger members will quickly outnumber the older men in The American Legion, and if friction arises, or differences of opinion, youth will have the final say.

The older men are not unaware of this. They are perfectly willing to see it happen; they want the younger men to take over. At the same time, the older members have invested a great deal of money in club houses and other equipment. The organization has a great amount of physical assets that the younger men will fall heir to, which if they form a separate organization they will have to duplicate or go without. As far as helping themselves, the men of today's army cannot do anything in a separate organization that they cannot do in The American Legion, and they will lose several advantages by going over by themselves.

But there is another side to it. Membership in The American Legion carries with it a prestige that is two-fold. It is the hallmark of a man who not only served his country in time of war, but who continues to serve it in time of peace. For The American Legion has not been solely concerned with getting something for its members. Frankly it has pushed with all its strength for veterans' legislation, for adjustment and other benefits. But also, and this will be eternally said, it has been always been more active in seeing what The American Legion could give the public in the way of service than it has been in seeing what The American Legion could get from the public in the way of benefits. The money raised by Legion posts, by sweat and elbow grease, and used for the underprivileged, is a vast sum. The swimming pools, the boys' clubs, the Christmas baskets, the Scout troops, and many other activities, which have come from the work of Legionnaires are the evidence that The American Legion is probably the greatest service organization in the country today. Some of these new groups are very likely fine organizations, but for the veterans of World War II, The American Legion looks like the best bet.

VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS

Reprinted from an Editorial in the Kingsport, Tenn., Times. Recently some literature was mailed to newspaper offices regarding a new veterans' organization which is being formed. This is just one of several that will probably be promoted, and each will make a strong bid to attract a many servicemen as possible and make their organization the leading one among the veterans of World War II. The sponsors of these organizations believe that the boys coming home should have their own organization rather than join The American Legion or other groups formed after the first World War.

The fighting men, and the rest of the men who go into uniform, are not asking any advice as to what sort of an organization they should join; they can settle that for themselves. But a man in service ought to ask himself how he can best serve his own interests now and in the future; he ought to be sure he is making his own choice and not getting hooked up with something a smart promoter started who may have some other interest besides unselfish devotion to the interest of the serviceman. Victory Clothing Collection Urged

NEW YORK, Dec. 12. - The President's War Relief Control Board has called upon all overseas war relief agencies in America to support the Victory Clothing Collection on behalf of UNRRA in one united nationwide endeavor to collect clothing that is desperately needed in bombed-out lands, it was announced today by Henry J. Kaiser, national chairman of the Victory Clothing Collection, scheduled for January 7-31.

Joseph E. Davies is chairman of the President's War Relief Control Board which was set up by an Executive Order to authorize and regulate the collection by voluntary agencies of funds and goods for overseas relief. Other Board members are Charles P. Taft and Charles Warren.

In making public the Board's directive, Mr. Kaiser stated that it was in line with a recommendation of President Truman who called the January clothing drive imperative and who declared, "The universal response to spring, when all groups concerned with problems of war relief joined with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in one great national clothing appeal has proven beyond any doubt the value and efficiency of the united endeavor."

Mr. Kaiser also made public a strong endorsement of the Victory Clothing Collection by the American Council of Voluntary Agencies for Foreign Service, of which Dr. Joseph P. Chamberlain is chairman. This endorsement urged it, 58 member agencies to make the Victory Collection a truly consolidated effort, and to abstain from any competing collection from Dec. 15, 1945 to Feb. 15, 1946.

The statement issued by the President's War Relief Control Board approved the plan for the Victory Clothing Collection and recommended full use of all community facilities throughout the nation in support of the Collection. It directed the more than 75 war relief agencies registered with the Board or subject to its jurisdiction not to "initiate or carry out any national or local public campaign to collect clothing for war relief purposes between the dates of Dec. 15 and Feb. 15, except in collaboration with and for the benefit of the Victory Clothing Collection."

Mr. Kaiser reported that 7,797 communities throughout America are already organizing local clothing drives under the direction of the 3,514 men and women who have so far accepted appointment as local chairmen.
