Treatment For Rug Mishaps—
Use white paper towels to absorb as much of the spills as possible. Place an old bath towel or cloth (uncolored) under the stained area. Press.
Always begin removing stain at the outer edges of the stained area, and gradually work in from the edges toward the center. (If you work from the center out you may enlarge the stained area). Do not at any time brush or rub a stained area vigorously as this action tends to distort the pile. The disturbed pile may be more objectionable than the stain. If a stain will respond at all to treatment, it will respond readily without harsh rubbing.

Quick Formula to Use: 1 teaspoonful of neutral (non alkaline) synthetic, soapless detergent such as those widely advertised for safe washing of fine fabrics; 1-2 pint lukewarm water. Put the detergent in a jar, mixing bowl, or other container. Add the water and stir vigorously until you have obtained a clear solution without residue. The amount of suds has no bearing on the effectiveness of the formula.
Apply this solution directly on the stain with an eye dropper. Using a rotary motion, sponge the stained area with a clean, white cloth beginning at the outer edge and working in. (Try to keep inside the stained area at all times). Blot up remaining moisture with damp cloths, sponging in the direction of the pile lay. Finally with another cloth dampened in clean, lukewarm water sponge the area again several times. Finish by blotting up remaining moisture with damp cloths. (Try this to remove stains to rugs or carpets caused by spilled foods, beverages or blood).
