News In The World Of Religion

BY W. W. REID

Ground has been broken on the shore of Lake Junaluska, "summer capital" of the Methodist Church in North Carolina, for a building to serve as the headquarters of the World Methodist Council, headquarters of the Methodist Historical Societies, and as the official archives of the Methodist Church. The new $50,000 edifice is being financed by private subscription. It will be dedicated in 1956.

After a quarter of a century of on-and-on discussion, general plans have been accepted for the union of five Christian communions in north India and in Pakistan, and these plans have now been returned to the governing bodies of the communions for approval or rejection. Much of the detail of organization has been left for action after the general plan has been accepted by some or all of the churches. The new church (as yet unnamed) will, however, have a synod meeting every three years, and a moderator "to be chosen from among the bishops." There will be emphasis upon the lay ministry of both men and women. The present groups that it is hoped to have in the united church are: the United Church of Northern India; the Church of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon (Anglican); the Methodist Church of Southern Asia (American); the Baptist Church; the British and Australian Methodist societies.

In Bangkok, Thailand,—an area of the world where it is not polite for "nice" people to get their hands dirty—over 150 members representing Christian groups of 15 countries, worked for two weeks recently with heavy, primitive tools to construct an outdoor basketball court at a "Boys' Town" for underprivileged youth. Two young Presbyterian missionaries were among the camp workers. As the group shoveled dirt, crushed stone, and poured concrete to the rhythm of choruses and hymns, they demonstrated the love of Christ for all people, and that work is not only for "us." Bangkok newspapers carried front page news releases and pictures. Buddhists stood in the shade marveling at or silently mocking the workers. One group of Thailand university students was so impressed that they joined the campers, not only in their work, but in their worship.

The International Missionary Council—highest Protestant missionary agency in the world, including scores of national councils and churches—in a recent "dedication on religious liberty" said in part: "We hold that an essential element in a good international order is freedom of religion. The rights which Christian discipleship demands are such as are good for all men, and no nation has suffered by reason of granting such liberties. The liberty with which Christ has set men free can neither be given nor destroyed by any government. Christians, because of their inner liberty, seek freedom to proclaim the Gospel in their own country, and to the uttermost parts of the earth. In a world in which God's sovereignty is often not acknowledged, Christians must be prepared to suffer. To witness by suffering is one way in which the Christian uses his freedom and justifies it. In seeking to win others to the Christian faith, the Christian must not use methods which are inconsistent with the Gospel which he proclaims. Meanwhile, in seeking this freedom, the Christian must faithfully express the duties of his citizenship, both on earth and in heaven, while accepting the tension between the two. We commend these considerations as basic to any approach by Christians to the issues of religious liberty."

A premiere showing of the American Bible Society's new feature-length motion picture, "Our Bible: How It Came to Us", will be given in Evanston, Ill., August 18, 21, 23, and 24, in connection with the Assembly of the World Council of Churches. Following the assembly, the film will be available for showing in the churches in America. The film, which has been years in planning, research and writing stages, traces Bible history and development since the time of Christ.

The Board of World Peace of the Methodist Church (Dr. Charles F. Ross, Jr., secretary, 740 Rush Street, Chicago) is urging churches of all denominations to study and know the United Nations—"our greatest hope for universal peace." It has just published a guide for churches and synagogues in the celebration of United Nations' Week, October 17 to 24. This guide contains prayers for the U. N., suggestions for church and community observations of the week, for World Order Sunday, together with recommended films.
