Mrs. Dellinger led in prayer, after which she reviewed the article, "Geared for Legislative Action" by Lucile Johnson. Mrs. Dellinger stated that the 84th Congress of the United States is in session and emphasized the fact that the responsibility of the American citizen does not end with the election of the best citizens fitted for the positions in Congress last fall.

The citizens have an obligation to keep informed on legislative matters and to convey his convictions to those who represent them in Congress. She also pointed out that Universal Military Training will be the first objective of the American Legion during this session of Congress. Mrs. Dellinger reminded the members that they have pledged one hundred percent support to the Legion in its efforts, but to make this support effective they must know the program. If every unit is geared for action they can give help of high value in making this session of Congress productive of legislation for the welfare of the war veterans and for the security of America.

Mr. C. A. Rudisill reviewed the article, "Our Nation's Security in the Year Ahead" by Alfredd S. Kelly. Mrs. Rudisill pointed out that the New Year is filled with overflowing with opportunity and responsibility lies before us. As we enter this year we still face the threat, insecurity and tension caused by serious international problems arising daily. It is their duty to give moral support to our President and the elected representatives with prayers and confidence. Security training for all young men is the American Legion's number one objective this year. The American Legion Auxiliary, together with other national women's patriotic organizations, will meet this month in our nation's capital to study and learn more of national security. May we be prayerful and resolute in our endeavors, thus laying a firm foundation for a secure and happy year for America.

The minutes of the December meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Robert Beam. The treasurer's report was given by Miss Helen Mauney. A good report was given by the membership committee.
