PRETTY SNOW SCENES IN CHERRYVILLE

Above are several beautiful snow scenes taken by Walter (sure-shot) Chapman on the morning of Monday, January 24th, after the second snow of the season fell on Sunday night, January 23rd. This was the prettiest snow scenes witnessed here in 30 years. It makes no difference how much you have studied Art in America or abroad, it makes no difference how high of a grade of paint you use or how long you study and paint your picture, there is no picture in the world, as pretty and great as that of the handy work of God with nature itself.

There is much snow still lying on the ground from the first seven inch snow fall on Tuesday night, January 18th. You know the old saying: when it lies on the ground for several days, it is waiting for more. It has been here 14 days.

Hymn Of The Week

By Rev. Ernest K. Emurian

MY FAITH LOOKS UP TO THEE

Unlike Tennyson, whose best poem was his last, "Crossing The Bar" being written during the poet's eighty-first year, Ray Palmer's best was his first, written when he was only twenty-two. In the fall of 1830, the young Yale graduate went to New York City as a teacher in a select school for young ladies, directed by a lady who was connected with St. George's Church.

There, he divided his time between teaching and studying theology, residing with the family of the director of the school. Accustomed from childhood to the expression of what his heart felt in the form of verse, he sat at his desk one night in the early winter of 1830, and began writing another poem. It was an hour "when Christ in the riches of His grace and love was so vividly apprehended as to fill the soul with the deepest emotion." With no thought of writing a hymn and without the slightest intention of penning a poem that any other eyes should ever read, he wrote six stanzas in the unusual 6.6.4-6.6.4 metre, the first of which read:

My faith looks up to Thee, Thou Lamb of Calvary, Saviour Divine;
Now hear me while I pray; Take all my guilt away;
O let me from this day, Be wholly Thine.

He was so deeply stirred that he stained the closing lines with abundant tears. Before he retired he wrote these words in his diary: "I wrote tonight a simple poem. I wrote just what I felt with little effort. I recollect that I penned the last words with tender emotion."

Later he copied the stanzas in a small morocco-covered book which he always carried with him for just such purposes, and promptly forgot all about them.

In the fall of 1832, two years after he had written what was to become his most famous hymn, Ray Palmer was visiting in Boston when he chanced to meet his friend, Dr. Lowell Mason, on a busy street. Mason, the father of American hymnology, asked the young man if he had come across any good new hymns for a "Hymn and Tune Book" which he planned to publish shortly with the assistance of Dr. Hastings of New York. Palmer hesitantly referred to his little book, so reluctant was he to let anyone else read the lines in which he had recorded his profound and moving spiritual experience. But when Mason read the stanzas, he asked for a copy. The men stepped into a store together and a copy was made which Mason put in his pocket. Upon arriving home, the musician read over the verses carefully, and was so much impressed that he composed an original tune for them which he named "Olivet."

Two days later the two men met again on another busy Boston street. Scarcely waiting to greet the young poet, Dr. Mason exclaimed, "Mr. Palmer, you may live many years and do many good things, but I think you will be best known to posterity as the author of 'My Faith Looks Up To Thee'."

The poet was ordained as a Congregational minister in 1835, holding pastorates and executive positions in Maine and New York. When he and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1882, a friend paid him this tribute: "The grandest privilege which God has ever given to His children upon earth and which He gives to comparatively few is to write a noble Christian hymn to be accepted by the churches, to be sung by reverent and loving hearts in different lands and in different tongues, and which still shall be sung as the future opens its brightening centuries."

Although he wrote other hymns and translated from the Latin such poetic gems as "Come Holy Ghost In Love" and "Jesus, Thou Joy Of Loving Hearts" before his death in 1887, English-speaking Christians are unanimous in agreeing that Ray Palmer's first hymn was his best.

Bessemer Boy Wins Photography Contest

Mars Hill—Boyd P. Falls, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin S. Falls of Bessemer City, has won the annual photography contest for students at Mars Hill College.

Boyd's entries captured four first ribbon prizes, three second place awards and two thirds. Judges also awarded the freshman business student the gold trophy for the best collection of photographs entered.

The ex-GI copped top honors in four divisions in the contest, features, sports, pictorial and scenic. His entries in the animal picture division, sports and miscellaneous divisions captured a total of three red-ribbon seconds, and his photos in the features, and miscellaneous divisions were adjudged third place winners.

Falls is a 1948 graduate of Lowell High School and served in the Army before enrolling at Mars Hill. He was an amateur photographer in the service but took a photography course during the fall semester at the 99-year-old Baptist junior college.

800,000 Persons Should Apply For Social Security Cards

"Many individuals are now covered by old-age and survivors insurance for the first time," Mr. Joseph P. Walsh, manager of the Gastonia social security office, announced today. "They need to take certain steps right away to be sure that they get social security credit for their present employment."

There are about 266,000 persons in the nation who should apply for social security account numbers. These applications should be filed without delay so that the employers of newly covered individuals will have the employees' social security account numbers when the first quarterly report is due in April 1955.

Mr. Walsh went on to explain that a hired farm worker who is paid as much as $100 cash wages in a year by any one farm operator, regardless of the number of days he is employed, must have a social security card and show it to his employer. Household employees (maids, butlers, chauffeurs, gardeners, cooks, etc.) who are paid as much as $50 cash wages in a calendar quarter by any one household employer, regardless of the number of days worked, will also have to have a social security card. Their employers will be required to report their wages to the District Director of Internal Revenue, beginning with the first quarter of 1955.

"The old test of regularity for farm and domestic workers was repealed by the 1954 Amendments to the Social Security Act which President Eisenhower signed into law on September 1, 1954," Mr. Walsh added.

Another group of employees eligible to come under the social security insurance program are employees of State and local governments (with the exception of policemen and firemen) who are now under a retirement system. They can now gain this protection provided a majority of the members of the system vote in favor of social security coverage. Those employees who elect to come into the old-age and survivors insurance system must apply for and have their social security cards before the first report is due this year.

All newly covered employees are instructed to write, visit, or phone their nearest social security district office and ask for application Form SS-5 if they have never had a social security account number before or have lost their original card. Mr. Walsh cautioned them not to get more assigned to them originally if they still have it or to apply for a duplicate of the old number if they have misplaced their original card. The district manager also advised that most post offices have a supply of account number applications on hand and that workers can obtain one there. They are requested to mail them to the district office of the Social Security Administration located at 212 W. 2nd Avenue in Gastonia.

Mr. Walsh also said that all local social security offices have a supply of pamphlets that describe the groups covered under the new law. He urges everyone who would like additional information to write to the social security office at the above address, requesting the pamphlet "A Brief Report," OASI-1954-1.
