Foley Kidney Pills
What They Will Do for You

They will cure your backache, strengthen your kidneys, correct urinary irregularities, build up the worn out tissues, and eliminate the excess uric acid that causes rheumatism. Prevent Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and restore health and strength. Refuse substitutes.

HEXAMETHYLENETHAMINE

Is the name of a German chemical, one of the many valuable ingredients of Foley's Kidney Remedy. Hexamethylene is recognized by medical text books and authorities as a uric acid solvent and anti-septic for the urine. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy promptly as the first sign of kidney trouble and avoid a serious malady.—Miller White Co.

HAD THE JURY FIXED.

In commenting on the adoption of the Salisbury-Asheville Highway via Mooresville, The Statesville Landmark congratulates Mooresville on securing the route. The Landmark's comment follows:

There has been some suggestion in other newspapers of a strong rivalry between Mooresville and Statesville on account of the location of the route of the Salisbury-Asheville highway. So far as The Landmark has been able to discover, there has been no rivalry. The truth is, Mooresville had the route laid out and nailed down before Statesville seemingly realized that a contest was on. True, The Landmark called attention to the matter some several times, but nobody went to work. Meanwhile, Mooresville, which had several advantages—in macadam road on the proposed route, in a river bridge, etc., none of which Statesville had to offer—got busy and secured the support of Salisbury, Newton and about all the rest and had the jury fixed long before the issue was submitted. After the procession had about passed and was fading into the sky, a few Statesville people rubbed their eyes, rushed out and gesticulated and said they would do so and so. But it was all over, even to the shouting. Talk about rivalry! Statesville didn't even qualify for the race. So far as The Landmark is personally concerned, if this town was on a so-called national automobile highway it would prefer having a law passed to make "the machines run around the town rather than have them come bouncing through here at the rate of 50 to 75 miles the hour, running over everything that doesn't get out of the way. We have enough of these "devil-wagons" as it is, without doing anything to encourage others to come. But while that is the personal feeling of the editor of this paper, he knows there are certain advantages in being on the line of these proposed through highways—the chief advantage being the good roads—and so he was anxious for Statesville to be on the Salisbury-Asheville line and was willing to whomp it up in a fair show, but seeing that Statesville wasn't in it there was no use to waste time and space and talk. While we wanted the road, we don't mind saying that the Mooresville folks deserved to win, for they saw what they wanted and got up and got it, and The Landmark herewith extends congratulations. We hope the incident will be profitable to Statesville; that we will get aroused as to the building of roads and bridges and things that will bring trade to Statesville, regardless of an automobile line; and in such event the present loss will not be without its benefits.

Davidson Route 24.

We have been having some mighty pretty weather and the people are getting about through picking cotton and at the same time are getting a great deal of wheat and oats in the ground, a big crop being sowed. A jolly time was had at the home of Mr. J. F. Mayhew last Tuesday night when he had a corn shucking. About 7 o'clock the crowd began to assemble, there being 47 present. At 10 o'clock they had shucked out 302½ bushels of corn. The occasion was said by many to be somewhat like old times. Mr. Mayhew found one stalk of corn that contained two ears which measured 26½ inches.

Mr. J. S. Blackwelder, of near Mooresville, was a visitor to Mr. and Mrs. Lollie Mayhew last week.

Miss Maggie Smith, of Mooresville, is spending a week with Misses Annie and Effie Statz.

Miss Roxie Smith spent Friday evening with Miss Rhett Mayhew.

Mr. L. A. Statz has lost two fine cows in the two past weeks. It is believed they were poisoned.

CRACKER.

Easy street is always crowded by people looking vainly for empty lodging.

Wash that itch away.

It is said that there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town!

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25 cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief. Miller-White Co.

THE FUTURE.

"If I could only know!"

What a desire we mortals have to penetrate the mysteries of the future. We are always trying to peer through the veil that thinly intervenes between us and the eternities, seeking to fathom the unknowable. The fortune teller and the palmist find their vocations because of that vain hope.

God has hidden the future from mortals vision.

And wisely so.

But some will say, "If I had only known my dear one was to pass so soon away into the unseen holy I should have had more enjoyment of him and made his days more pleasant."

Would you?

With the black cloud of certain bereavement hanging over his head and yours, could you have enjoyed the intervening days? Ask yourself that. Had you known the fatal day you would have been a mourner all the interval.

Merciful veil!

The limitations of our knowledge save us. If we could read the horoscope of the future we might be appalled by the revelations.

If you could foresee what is to be, either your eagerness to enjoy the coming happiness or your dread of the coming sorrow would sadly unfit you for the sober duties of your everyday life.

The secret of the future would put a great unrest in your life. And it might turn your brain

With such a tremendous revelation it would be impossible to live your accustomed life.

Would you, anxious mother, really like to know the future of your baby?

Do you say yes?

Suppose that vision of the days to come showed a little white coffin?

No; what is to be is wisely hidden.

If the dread of an uncertainty sometimes makes sore the heart within us, what would be the monstrous dread of a certainty?

It is better, much better, to walk by faith. As Whittier says:

I know not where his islands lie
Their fringed palms in air,
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.
—Edwin A. Nye, in Age-Herald.

It is Waste of Time.

Every girl now longs for a career just as in the old days she longed for coral beads or a beau, says Kate Masterson in writing on "The Girl with a Career," in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for December.

Lacking talent, girls now call a business life a "career."

This "career" hides in a glorified mist in the distance and calls Alice from her comfortable place by the fire in the Wonderland, which the working life seems to her at this stage, no matter how simple or how sordid may be the task she sees beckoning her.

Many of these career-hungry girls accomplish nothing. After a stormy period of push and purpose, more spectacular than real, they fall out of the strife, luckily for them, and either return to the home-nest or marry, which last result seems to satisfy most of them quite as much as the longed-for-business life.

The girl who wants a career really wishes to be something out of the common, even to be fine and great, but the fact is, a great many of these girls are longing for adventure little as they dream that this underlies the "purpose" they fancy possesses them. The best proof is that so few of them keep on consistently.

The girl with the career microbe will crowd the more experienced woman out in nine cases out of ten, and will then begin her wage-earning with all manner of ideas besides industry alone, of the proper way to get on.

There are thousands of these girls preening their pompadours from cashiers' desks and telephone boards in the hotels, all hungry for flirtation, dress, romance, admiration—everything really but work, which they despise. They may not know themselves to this extent, for they are but girls, and it comes natural to them to love things besides work.

Such a girl, for instance, could never be made to understand that her real chance for success and for genuine happiness lies back there in the home or the village she has left.

She would certainly be chagrined if she were to be told that in the real business life of a big city she is only a disturbing factor, holding a chance for bread away from women and girls actually dependent on their wages for a livelihood and with no homes waiting to which they may return.

AT BASE OF RURAL PROBLEM.

In an absorbing analytical study of the rural and cost of living problems, made in a speech recently delivered before the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, Richard H. Edmonds, editor of The Manufacturers' Record, laid down his premise as to both:

There will be no material change until country life is made relatively as attractive as city life; until good roads are almost as universal as good streets; until the high price of farm products make the farm more profitable than industrial development, and thus drive men by economic force back to the country.

Mr. Edmonds cited other contributing causes to the cost of living, but the agricultural production phase, and the good roads feature, were among the most pre-eminent.

The formula of community growth and development is an extremely fundamental one.

First, last and all the time, it is transportation.

The railroad is the great backbone of transportation for state, nation and city.

For nation, state and city it is supplemented by streets and good roads. For the country districts, it is exclusively supplemented by good roads.

It would be as useless to gridiron Georgia with railroads, and leave off adequate highways, as it would be to centralize every railroad in the south in Atlanta, and leave off streets.

The day the rural districts possess good roads in a degree equivalent to that in which the city possesses good streets, the country problem will be in the dawn of its solution.

For in the wake of good roads goes every other agency of civilization, development, enlightenment, prosperity.

The very first reward for a good highway, maintained the year round, is rural free delivery. And once a community is assured rural free delivery, that factor turns loose its own beneficent harvest, too far-reaching and inclusive to be enumerated.

Next comes enhancement of farm values, cheaper and easier access to market, more settlers, more schools, more churches.

Beyond all, come those improved and more intimate social opportunities and relations the lack of which is the very backbone of the isolation and stagnation which in themselves spell the widely discussed "rural problem."

People were a long time realizing these facts, for the reason that, in their enthusiasm over the marvelous results wrought by the railway, they expected that advance agent of civilization to carry all the load of development.

Understanding of the misconception is now universally prevalent.

Place side by side, in a comparative analysis, two towns and counties on the same railroad. Now assume that one town has provided itself with good streets, and that the county contiguous has followed the example by building good roads.

Compare it with the town and county next door which have done neither.

Well, you can't compare them—that's all. And its for the very simple reason that you can find no basis for comparison between success and failure, and their synonyms, initiative and indifference.

So that, from whatever angle you view it, good roads is the bedrock upon which must be build the solution of the rural problem.

Fortunately, Georgia has a fair start in the right direction.—Atlanta Constitution.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this Tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE.

Miss Emma Tays passed out full and free November 3, 1910. Loving friends and relatives were with her till the last and carried her remains to their last resting place at Stony Point.

The deceased was born at Liberty Hill, Ireddell county, February 25, 1839. At the early age of sixteen, she lost her right lower limb, and for fifty-five years patiently bore her affliction, using a staff and later a crutch.

Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth. Soon after becoming a cripple, she lost both father and mother. Thus she was left. But the Odd Fellows of her neighborhood, realizing that an investment in character and in the proper training of a life for usefulness was safe and sure, sent her to Statesville Female College. Here she applied herself diligently and graduated with honor in the class of 61.

During the war she taught in Catawba county. At the close of the war she came to south Ireddell, and for thirty years taught in the public schools of this county, making her home in the family of the late Mr. J. C. Deaton, of Mooresville. After Mr. Deaton's death, she lived with his daughter, Mrs. M. D. Brown, at whose home she peacefully came.

With a patience that was proverbial, a faith that was unflinching, and a love that was an open sesame to all hearts, she toiled. The reward came with her work. The joy of co-operating with parents in the moulding of their children's character was hers, and lent dignity and usefulness to her life. Unaccompanied all the way, yet many, many rose to love her.

She was one of the charter members of the Mooresville M. E. church, and was deeply interested in every phase of church work. Of her limited means she gave generously to the various calls. Sunday after Sunday she met her class in the Sabbath school with a preparation of mind and heart that made her an efficient teacher.

But after seventy-one years of service, mind and body lost their vigor. Her work was done and faithfully so. Those who loved her best felt there was hardly an element of sadness in her going. Her staff and crutch are laid aside. Her youth is renewed.

We bless the Lord for her life as it was. We bless Him for her life as it is.—Mrs. C. H. Hamilton.

Where Lutherans are Few.

The population of the Ohio penitentiary is about 1,500, and according to a report of the chaplain, about 600 are Roman Catholics, while only 27 are Lutherans. The South Carolina penitentiary, with 615 convicts, has 2 Lutherans among its population, while the superintendent, one of the best of the institution has ever had, comes from the adjoining county of Lexington, a territory where Lutherans are more numerous than perhaps in any portion of the United Synod. ## THE SPEED LUST.

The automobile has come to stay and to fill a needed place in our transportation facilities. Improvements are being made all the time, and after a while the price will be such that they can be within the reach of those who cannot now buy them. But there seems to have been born with them a speed lust that is responsible for many accidents and not a few deaths. To illustrate how this speed lust unconsciously affects the owner of machines, a visitor to Raleigh this week says that the most careful man in Raleigh took him to ride in his machine. The chauffeur wished to go fast, but the gentleman said: "Be careful and do not speed," and so they went along at a nice speed. After a while another machine was heard in the rear and the man who said "be careful" had his sporting blood up by the attempt of the man in the rear to pass him, and he said to his chauffeur, "Do not let him pass us." That was all the chauffeur wanted, and he let the machine go at a rapid speed so that the machine in the rear could not pass. That illustrates the speed lust that seems to get in the blood of many who run automobiles. It was this speed lust that caused the deplorable accident in Raleigh this week. Writing of it, the Memphis Commercial Appeal says:

"Why is it that when a man becomes the owner of an automobile he immediately feels born in his brain a mania for speed?"

"This is a problem that no one seems to be in a position to satisfactorily solve."

"It is not necessary to own a car to acquire the lust for speed. It comes unsolicited even to the person who rides for pleasure."

"No one seems to fully realize just how fast they are running in a motor car. They are affected the same way on an ordinary train or street car. The very fact that we are moving, propelled by an invisible power, seems to create a desire to quicken the speed."

"It is not so bad in ordinary every day use. When men, fully recognizing the danger, deliberately place their lives in danger on the sharp turns of the regulation auto courses and speed for prizes until the track is bloodstained, the risk is without excuse or explanation."

"Prize fights have been condemned because they are brutal and blood is spilled. Very few pugilists have ever been killed. Many fights occur every week without fatal result."

"Bull fights are condemned because they are cruel. They are cruel. In bull fights the harmless animal is slain because it affords pleasure. The lust for blood is strong with the people of Spain and Mexico."

"It is the natural inheritance of a barbaric age. It is the gift of our stone age ancestors, passed down through generations of men. It is concealed by the thin veneer of civilization, but whenever we are in Spain or Mexico or on the automobile courses of Palm Beach or Savannah, or watch the death-defying achievements of the Vanderbilt cup race, then we realize that our enlightenment is limited. We still permit the lust for blood, which has passed from generation to generation, from the age of savagery to the age of today to assert itself."

In the recent Savannah auto races the usual toll of death was exacted. Embedded in bloody mud, one man was dragged from the path of death, but he had paid the price. Another was sent a quivering, shattered semblance of a man to the hospital to die unconscious that an accident had ever happened.

"But the crowd cheered the winner. It was excited. The lust for blood was in the air, just as it always is in the smoke of battle when souls are soaring upward at every exchange of shot and the thirsty earth is drinking up the blood of those who fall."

"The speed devil always claims his own."—News and Observer.

Follow this advice.

Quaker Oats is the best of all foods. It is also the cheapest. When such men as Prof. Fisher of Yale University and Sir James Crichton Browne, LL.D.-F.R.S., of London spend the best parts of their lives in studying the great question of the nourishing and strengthening qualities of different foods, it is certain that their advice is absolutely safe to follow.

Professor Fisher found in his experiments for testing the strength and endurance of athletes that the meat eaters were exhausted long before the men who were fed on such food as Quaker Oats. The powers of endurance of the non-meat eaters were about eight times those of the meat eaters.

Sir James Crichton Browne says—eat more oatmeal, eat plenty of it and eat it frequently.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

It is an Internal Disease and Requires an Internal Remedy.

The cause of Rheumatism and kindred diseases is an excess of uric acid in the blood. To cure this terrible disease this acid must be expelled and the system so regulated that no more acid will be formed in excessive quantities. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with Oil and Liniment, or not curing affords only temporary relief at best, causes you to delay the proper treatment, and allows the malady to get a firmer hold on you. Liniments may ease the pain, but they will not cure Rheumatism. That which will change the fibre of rotten wood.

Science has at last discovered a perfect and complete cure, which is called "Rheumoid." Tested in hundreds of cases, it has effected the most marvelous cure; we believe it will cure you. Rheumoid "gets at the joints from the inside," sweeps the poisons out of the system, tones up the stomach, regulates the liver and kidneys and makes you well all over. Rheumoid "strikes the root of the disease and removes its cause." This scientific remedy is sold by druggists and dealers generally at 50c. and $1.00. It is in tablet form at 25c. and 50c. a package. Get a bottle today. Booklet free if you write to Bobbitt Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md. Trial bottle tablets 25c. by mail. Sold in Mooresville by Miller-White Co., and Geo. C. Goodman & Co., and by druggists generally.
