Godwin was active in the North Carolina Young Democratic Clubs before entering the FBI, and was serving on the State Executive Committee, was chairman of the First District Executive Committee and president of the Gates county club when he left home.

Men 18 To 25 Still Are Under WMC Control

According to information received from the State Director of Selective Service for North Carolina, the "job-jumping" provisions of the Regulations remain in full force and effect as to registrants ages 18 through 25. Recent publicity relating to the release of manpower controls by other Government agencies may have given the erroneous impression that it is no longer necessary for them to obtain a favorable determination from local boards before leaving the employment for which they are deferred.

Therefore, this is to remind registrants of Gates County Local Board No. 1, who are in the 18 through 25 age group, that they are still subject to the provisions and that if they leave employment for which they have been deferred without a favorable determination from their Local Board, they will be placed in a class available for service, according to Mrs. Lillie M. B. Overman, clerk of the Gates County Local Board.

4-H PROJECT

arily did, Artz said. "She did not seem to be sick for she ate her dairy feed all right. The milk supply let up a little, too. Mrs. Webb thought perhaps a little extra loose salt, besides the salt brick, might give the cow an appetite. The loose salt was provided in ample quantity and sure enough the cow's appetite picked up and she started grazing again," the agent continued.

"All livestock producers and family cow owners may learn something from this," he added. "It pays to supply an adequate amount of loose salt in addition to the salt brick in order to meet the requirements of the animals."

The agent said: "Salt requirements differ for each class of animals. They differ even with animals in the same class. Furthermore, they differ with the season of the year and with the kind of feed. Only by feeding salt free choice can we be sure that livestock are getting all the salt they want when they want it."
