HITCHCOCK'S PRETTY OPENING.

Beautiful Display of Articles for Fall and Winter at the New Store.

Webster's Weekly, 23rd.

The event of the season, in the mercantile realm, was the grand opening of fall and winter millinery and dress goods at Hitchcock's Cash Store, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 15th and 16th. These were indeed gala days for the ladies of Reidsville and vicinity. They always look forward to this occasion with pleasurable expectations. We enjoy much in anticipation. From every standpoint this was an unprecedented success. Owing to the delay in getting their new store the opening was nearly a month later than usual. So the ladies had quite a while to get their expectations whetted. But Hitchcock was equal to the emergency even if they had been expecting more than they were.

Any city in North Carolina might well be proud of this firm's new store. It occupies the first and second stories in the right hand section of the Kennedy Block, fronting Gilmer and Scales streets, and is by odds the most attractive business stand in Reidsville. It is roomy, comfortable, neat, clean, well ventilated and lighted, and has the most elegant show windows this side of Richmond. To say that it was built especially for Mr. Hitchcock, his plans being followed to the letter, will give some idea of its beauty, convenience and completeness. Our merchant price never does things by halves.

Mr. Hitchcock and Mrs. Irvin in buying their stock were mindful of the fact that they would have plenty of room and bought accordingly. It is the largest stock of the kind ever brought to Reidsville.

The ladies flocked to the store by hundreds; the crowd was simply immense. It reminded one of holiday times when lady shoppers turn out en masse.

But to get down to business. On entering we will go first to the dress goods counter. Here we find a full line of standard goods, serge, cashmeres, etc., in all colors and qualities. These are as unchangeable for street wear as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Beautiful broadcloths in different weights and colors were shown, together with the serviceable and stylish camel's hair. The boucles and bourettes which make such beautiful warm winter suits were to be seen. The display of materials for evening costumes was exceedingly pretty, consisting of voiles, silks, crepe weaves, crepe de chimes, etc.

Trimmings to suit every style, quality and color of goods named are shown in great abundance. Front-worn were the appliques in white cream and black. These trim so beautifully that Dame Fashion is loth to give them up. Gumps, galloons, frogs, cords, etc., are seen in many different patterns.

Brands will form a very important part of the season's trimmings, as evidenced by the splendid assortment displayed. While especially suited to tailor-made gowns, they are in such variety and so many combinations that they seemed suited to almost any purpose.

Their line of velvets and silks were never more complete or more in favor. Near the dress goods counter we see displayed the cloaks, capes, jackets, etc., of different cuts and qualities. All can be pleased out of the variety from which they have to select.

It is predicted each season that fewer shirt-waists will be seen, but on the contrary they grow more in favor, and more elaborate. The show of goods for this purpose was never more beautiful or varied. Silks in plain, plaid, and figures, and the assortment of woolsens is exceedingly attractive. Bordered materials are much in evidence, with designs and colorings that are unique.

Their line of hosiery is fully up to the standard. If you try their Black Cat Hosiery for children, especially for boys, you will be much pleased. Nothing wears better.

Their wool and cotton underwear is especially nice. The white lamb's wool vests are beautiful in quality and very comfortable looking. The red in all-wool are advised for the delicate. They have pairs to match in all the grades of white and colors.

An endless variety of hamburgs and laces are displayed at their counter. It is always wisdom to have a nice assortment of these things for winter. It would indeed be hard to match their line of these goods.

The house keeper will be interested above others in the handsome table linen, napkins, towels, curtains of different varieties, dresser covers, and such like. Pretty patterns of upholstering goods are also shown.

One of the most interesting features of the opening was the handsome line of furs displayed. They will become even more appreciated a little later when the cold December winds begin to blow. They are even more in favor for this season than for several years past.

The millinery department was a thing of beauty. "The Milliner's Retreat" was prettily curtained in, making an attractive corner and a less public place for the fitting of hats. Mr. Hitchcock has long enjoyed an enviable reputation in the realm of millinery. Assisted by two of his milliners, Miss Gump and Mrs. Irvin, in the selection of his present stock, he has completely eclipsed all previous seasons. You may think this strong language, but go and see if it is not true.

The headgear is simply gorgeous this season. Hats are very large and flat, as though they were made to hold an endless amount of trimmings. Birds and feathers of all descriptions are much in demand. The most beautiful laces in black, and white, together with other gauzy materials, touched by the hand of the artist, make some of the hats a dream of Lovell's.

For hats of a less dressy and more serviceable nature, there are wings, birds, etc., and many pretty patterns of silk in the new plaids that are just coming to the fore.

Ribbons were shown in endless variety. It would be hard to find a more effective trimming for misses and children's hats.

Their stock is up to date in everything found in a first class millinery establishment, such as handkerchiefs, neckwear, gloves, etc. They are still agents for the celebrated Centemeri kid glove.

If you were not at the opening, do the next best thing you can and visit the Big Store at once. Mr. Hitchcock, the merchant prince, and his assistants, Mrs. Cornie Irvin, Miss Mae Gump, Mrs. S. E. Parrish and Misses Ada Denny, Laura Powell and Lal Burnett, will esteem your presence a compliment and make your visit one of unalloyed pleasure.

Miss Amanda Hitchcock's millinery-making establishment, is situated on the second floor. She has unrivalled facilities for planning, cutting and fitting and is assisted by several experienced and artistic dress-makers. She will take pleasure in assisting any patron in the selection of materials, etc.

Kitchin Gives Patterson a Roast.

Roxboro, N. C., Oct. 14—Hon. W. W. Kitchin spent Sunday and a part of Monday here with his family.

Your correspondent approached Mr. Kitchin and asked him about the charges being made by his opponent against him. Mr. Kitchin said in reply to the question: "Mr. Patterson, after refusing by his chairman and to me personally a joint discussion is misrepresenting both my record and my campaign. He said I charged him with being the candidate of the corporations, which is not true. A majority of the corporations of the district and State are Democratic. They cannot compare corporations with monopolies. The trusts and monopoly forces want Mr. Patterson elected. This is my charge. He said in Durham that I was trying to arouse strife between employer and employe, which is utterly untrue."

"When he declined to meet me, I knew he would have the opportunity of making charges which are false, and which can be easily answered, but I did not expect him to use it."

"Many of the best owners of mills, as well as operatives throughout the district have heard me speak, and not one has heard a word that carried a spirit to arouse prejudice between the employer and the employed. I made my appeals to the conscience and manhood of my hearers and in every speech I try to make men better."

"I shall speak again in Durham where he seems to have misled the people somewhat, and as heretofore, no man who hears me will misunderstand my words."

"He has surprised me, however, in nothing more than in his misrepresentation of my resolution which I introduced to prevent sectarian legislation. The whole intent of which is to emphasize the doctrine of separation of church and State, which he knew was introduced during my first term in Congress, and has been re-introduced in each succeeding Congress, and yet he has said it was for the benefit of Mormonism, which he must know to be untrue."

Mr. Kitchin upon being asked as to his majority, said "Unless a large amount of money is used in behalf of my opponent, I will carry the district by about nine thousand, but I am confident of six thousand majority in spite of all the money they can spend."

THE OLIVER-CARTER WEDDING.

Ceremony Performed by Rector Fetter at the Episcopal Church.

Henry Blount, in Raleigh Post.

Reidsville, N. C., Oct. 22.—As the modesty of your brilliant and talented Reidsville correspondent will not permit her polished pen to describe that scene of intoxicating beauty and happiness that was witnessed tonight in Reidsville as her clever and handsome brother was particeps criminis, as the lawyers would call it, in the glittering tiara of attractiveness. I will myself, in my plain, blunt way, tell of a scene where heart met heart upon the love throbbing current of estatic bliss and rapture. At Hyman's shrine, Cupid has brought the loveliest offering, and amid a joyous scene of beauty and brilliancy, of fond hopes, melting into sweetest fruition, a true, noble, handsome young gentleman, with a life in perfect trend with all that is high and praiseworthy, and a pure, lovely, most attractive young woman, with all the seductive charms and resplendent virtues that adorn true womanhood, united their young lives in that bliss dimpled current of reciprocal endearment that flows so beautifully upon the song threaded river of marriage. St. Thomas Episcopal church was the place and Manton Marble Oliver and Miss Mary Love Carter were the contracting parties. The Rev. F. A. Fetter, the popular rector, officiated, and Mr. Francis Womack presided at the organ, and Prof. Kirkman accompanied him on the organ, and furnished exquisite music. At 9 o'clock the deep-toned, melodious breathings of the organ announced the arrival of the bridal party, and into an exquisite scene of beauty and fragrance and melody and song Messrs. Chas. Harris and Houston Neal marched down the centre aisle, followed by Misses Ethel Wright and Pannie Holt, of Jacksonville, Fla., who were met at the altar by Dr. J. A. Williams and Mr. Russel Tucker, who came down the right and left aisles. Then the maid of honor, Miss Adelaide Godshaw, of Tryon, came down the center aisle, and was followed by the exposure of attraction the lovely Miss Mary Love Carter and her brother, Mr. Robert Carter, of Nebraska. At the same time Manton Marble Oliver, with his "best man," Mr. W. W. Blackwell, entered from the vestry. And then with the beautiful and exquisite Episcopal marriage ritual they were united in love knit union and fond hearts met in sweet communion. The bride was handsomely gowned in white silk mull over taffeta, with duchess lace veil, caught with pearls, carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and maiden hair fern. The maid of honor and the bride's maids were poems of ravishing beauty in white organite and white carnations. The church was tastefully and artistically decorated, and seemed a fitting realm for Flora to hold her carnival of beauty and brilliancy. After the ceremony the bridal party assembled at the residence of Capt. J. H. Carter, where exquisite refreshments were served, after which, amid heartiest congratulations, the happy couple took the northbound train for Washington City. Luray Caves and other points of interest. Thus united, with the manliest virtues and the sweetest womanly graces so happily and so harmoniously blending, life will be to them sweet with perfume and resonant with song, and every song will seem an echo of celestial harmony.

WHO'S AFRAID?

Not the man who carries sufficient insurance. It's the other fellow—the one who attempts to save by running risks—carries no insurance whatever. He is the one who fears the spread of fire.

Why not get rid of this dread? Why not invite the confidence of manufacturers? Credit is more readily extended to those who carry fire insurance on stock and business premises.
