WASHINGTON LETTER

Timely Topics Discussed by Tavenner.

The Review's Washington Correspondent Sends in Batch of Matter That Will Interest All Readers of This Paper.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Judge Gary, head of the Steel Trust, attended a banquet in New York. The food was excellent; the lights were bright; the silver shimmered; the wine sparkled; the cigars added a final completeness to the happiness of all present. When it came Judge Gary's turn to speak, his mind was saturated with benevolence, and his thoughts turned to the welfare of the republic, and the sufferings of working men. Listen to him:

"Things are being said at the present time that are closely akin to the things that were said just prior to the French Revolution. * * * Unless capitalists, corporations and men of great wealth and power take a leading part in the amelioration of conditions, there will be changes made later by the mob."

The same newspapers which told the story of the banquet, and of Judge Gary's speech, also chronicled the testimony of witnesses before the Stanley committee. These witnesses told how the Steel Trust forced men to work 12 hours a day, seven days a week, for wages which compelled them to live like swine—a condition which Judge Gary could ameliorate with a few strokes of his pen. The banquet hall is dark. The diners are gone. The tables are stripped of their damask and vials. And somewhere in that deserted room, shrunken so small that even the servants failed to see it when they swept out the crumbs, is Judge Gary's Beautiful Altruism.

Once in his life Theodore Roosevelt almost expressed an opinion on the tariff question. In a preliminary draft of one of his messages, as it came from the printer, was this sentence:

"In a later message I shall discuss the tariff."

This document fell into the hands of Senators Aldrich and Lodge and Speaker Cannon, and immediately they rushed to the White House. Presto, when the message was finally submitted to Congress, it contained no reference whatever to the tariff. Aside from that single sentence, no living man can quote the former President on the tariff question.

The Senate was discussing the bill for the establishment of a United States Department of Commerce and Labor. Senator Borah, author of the bill, had gone to great lengths to explain how the huge corporations were exploiting little children, crushing them, with hard labor, while they were yet of tender years. He explained that the bill contemplated no interference with the proper relations of parents toward their own children, and that its purpose was merely to provide for the collection of figures and information on which the various States and municipalities could base a proper solution of the child welfare problem.

"In the big cities," said Senator Borah, "little children foster and sweat and steal and starve and die by the thousands. This bill is designed to aid them."

When Mr. Borah had finished up rose Senator Heyburn, and for two hours the Senate listened to his wall about the "unconstitutionality" of the bill. His final argument was that Abraham Lincoln was a poor boy.

Prospects for Big Tobacco Crop.

We have every evidence that there will be a big effort to plant a large crop of tobacco the coming season, not only in the cotton belt, but in the tobacco growing section everywhere. Of course accidents may happen to check the extensive preparations, but if seasons should be favorable there will be a record breaking crop planted. From all we can find out about it, there is room for an increase, and while an extra large crop may cause prices to drop from what they are this year, yet we know of no good reasons why prices should not continue good for a while any way. At the same time it should not be forgotten that there is such a thing as over production, as is evidenced by the low prices of cotton at present. We trust that warehousemen and tobacco men generally, will preach the doctrine of good tobacco, good handling and careful marketing.—Southern Tobacco Journal.

A REPUDIATED SENATOR.

Does a Similar Fate Lie in Store For Simmons?

Another reactionary United States Senator is doomed to retire by popular request. The latest undesirable who has been repudiated by his constituents is Murphy J. Foster, of Louisiana.

Foster became a senator in 1901. As governor of his State he had earned promotion by leading the successful fight against the Louisiana Lottery Company. Much was expected of him, but it soon developed that while he could be relied upon to rally a posse for the pursuit of an outlaw dog, he had no stomach for the braver job of tackling a live lion.

However, being a clever politician, he managed to keep in good standing for eight years. He was re-elected in 1907, and things ran along smoothly until the great show-down on the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill.

He had to take an open stand, and he did. Whenever Aldrich really needed him he did not allow the tariff principles of his party to interfere with his personal desire to vote with the opposition. In short, he was a Democratic standpatter.

Louisiana might have stood for this, because her planters approved of the part he played in the cunning game that resulted in the preservation of the Dutch standard in the sugar schedule, but soon he went further and overstepped the bounds. He voted with the Old Guard and its Democratic reserves against the expulsion of Senator "Bill" Lorimer.

That settled Foster. The other day a Senatorial election was held in Louisiana, and when the returns came in he was surprised to find that his toga had been wrested from him by Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell.

Thus, one by one, the roses fall. Ere long the defiant phalanx of forty-six senators that stood by Lorimer and against the people will dwindle to a mere corporal's guard.

Already the ranks are decimated, and every Senatorial primary reports another stalwart among the missing. Does a similar fate lie in store for another Lorimer friend—Senator Simmons of North Carolina?—Winston Sentinel.

Rev. Cornelius Miller Dead.

Rev. Cornelius Miller, in years passed a beloved pastor of the congregation at Alamance church, died yesterday at his home at Dalton, Stokes county. He had been in ill health for a long while and the end was not unexpected. The body is to be brought to Greensboro today and carried to Alamance church, where the funeral and interment will take place, the services to begin at 1:30 o'clock.

Mr. Miller is survived by his widow and several children. He was well known in this section of the State; was an influential Presbyterian minister, and a man with many warm personal friends. Nearly a quarter of a century ago, Mr. Miller left Alamance church, after being pastor of the congregation for six years. His memory has been kept green with the thoughts of his goodness in that neighborhood, while he has been away in his ministry to the children of his Master, and that he comes home to rest at last is a sad pleasure to the people of his old church.

Mr. Miller married in his young manhood Miss Scales, of Madison, a member of an excellent family. She survives his death. The funeral today will be preached by Rev. Dr. R. C. Anderson, of Gastonia, a life-long friend of the deceased.—Winston Sentinel.

Child Burned to Death.

At Rural Hall at 11 o'clock Thursday morning the four-year-old child of Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Williams was burned to death. The little one was in the room alone when the accident occurred. The father was away and the mother was in another part of the house. She left the child in the room playing and when she returned she found it wrapped in flames.

The clothing was entirely burned off. The child's screams attracted the mother and several neighbors. Mr. Williams is pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Rural Hall. He and Mrs. Williams have the sympathy of many friends.—Danbury Reporter.

Here is a message of hope and good cheer from Mrs. C. J. Martin, Boone Hill, Va., who is the mother of eighteen children. Mrs. Martin was cured of stomach trouble and constipation by Chamberlain's Tablets after five years of suffering, and now recommends these tablets to the public. Sold by all dealers.

CHARLES J. ADAMS,

WITH THE FARMERS

"Uncle Si" is the Editor of This Department.

Things Said and Written by Farmers to Farmers and in the Interest of Farmers and the Farmers' Union of Rockingham County.

Editors Review: We notice "June Sweetener" takes "Uncle Si" to task for what he said about dancing. The substance of what he did say was this: That dancing was contrary to church discipline of most churches, and that there were people who disliked having their children dance, and we say so yet, except there are not as many opposed to dancing as we first thought, unless it depends upon who does the dancing.

Some years ago the natives were frightened by a little stage game that was acted by little girls going through a kind of skipping drill, which was part of a school entertainment, and exclaimed, "O, Heaven and earth, they are teaching our children to dance!"

If it was wrong to teach dancing then, it is wrong to teach it now. If it was wrong to dance then, it is wrong to dance now.

Since when has come this change? If I belonged to a church and the rules thereof forbid dancing would I not be showing the church poor respect to dance?

If we ever opposed dancing can we be consistent without opposing it yet? If ever we regarded dancing being unpopular, why should it be popular now, even though all the school "mamas" dance?

The latest news is the school house—that sacred seat of learning dedicated to the education of the head—has been used to educate the heel as well as at a box party, namely stealing partners to the tune of "Old Dan Tucker," etc. Yet there are those who say "stealing partners" is not dancing. Let that be as it may, we saw a fellow dance so hard one night stealing partners that he sweated big balls of perspiration. "Buzfuz" says that in the Orient big fellows have their dancing done by proxy. We wonder if "June Sweetener" is having his done by proxy.

O, Lord, how times have mended! Good music and dancing! When we thought more sacred things would be intended.

If things go on as they are now "June Sweetener" and "Uncle Si" ere long may be "tripping the light fantastic," too. Whom big ones lead little ones are apt to follow.

A dancing girl caused a mighty good man to lose his head. It is to be hoped "June Sweetener" and "Uncle Si" will not lose their heads in that way.
YOUR UNCLE SI.

The following is taken from The Union Republican, published at Winston-Salem:

Much interest is being paid to chickens in this part of the moral vineyard at the present time and it can be made both a pleasant as well as profitable employment as a side issue, either in the city or the country. But there is another feature that could be added to home life, especially in the country, and that is the keeping of bees. We do not mean a few old-fashioned box-hives set away in one corner of the yard to which little or no attention is given. Bee keeping with improved methods is profitable. It requires very little time, possibly a couple of hours during a few months in the year, which affords liberal compensation. The local editor of this paper gathered 30 pounds of honey, in one pound sections, from one hive the past season in the very center of the city. With more hives he could have done the same. That is bee keeping on a very small scale. Let us see how it is under more pretentious efforts. A friend in Surry county, as a side-line, and with about a day a week altogether during about three months of the year, April, May and June, and several hours occasionally later on, looked after some fifty colonies of bees. He has the latest improved methods and Italian bees, and we are told that his receipts for honey the past year aggregated something like $500, possibly more. What he did others can do, with a comparatively small outlay, little time, and as much profit.
