

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catov, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. NEW PLAN FOR FIGHTING THE HOOKWORM DISEASE

The State Board of Health has changed its plan of fighting hookworm disease. Instead of selecting a county and spending a short time there—the dispensary method—the Board now selects a community and sends a member of the force there to stay until every case of hookworm is treated and cured. In addition to that, sanitary precautions are installed in every home in the community which will prevent hookworm diseases, typhoid fever and all other diseases due to soil pollution.

One community, Knotts Island, in Currituck county, has already the benefit of such intensive work. Three communities, Salenburgh, in Sampson county; Castle Haynes and Wrightsboro, in New Hanover county, and Philadelphus in Roberson county are being worked along this plan at the present time.

Any community in any county in the State may have such work done and the Board of Health invites interested individuals or officials to communicate with the office in Raleigh for further information.

IS THERE ANY NECESSITY FOR A HOG IN REIDSVILLE?

The city commissioners, at their next meeting, will either adopt a stringent ordinance relating to pig pens in Reidsville or they will pass an ordinance prohibiting the keeping of pigs in Reidsville after the first of the coming year.

Some of the commissioners who took the view that it would not be fair to sprinkle a part of the streets and leave the others not sprinkled—who thus reason that it is not fair to improve one sidewalk without improving all of them, or that New York should not connect up some streets with electric lines unless it provided them on all the streets, or that the national government should not give Reidsville a public building unless it also gave every other town one—think it may be advisable to prohibit the keeping of hogs on Main, Lindsey, and a few other streets, and allow the keeping of hogs on certain other streets.

As a matter of fact the commissioners have a right to do this very thing. They also have a right to sprinkle those streets which need it most and over which there is the most travel. But is it wise to prohibit the keeping of hogs on a few streets and permit them being kept on other streets?

The point is made that people in the mill districts and in the colored settlements accumulate a saving in having a hog to kill each fall which they would not have if they were not permitted to keep them. The same rule would apply to the more prosperous class of people who have more waste from their tables to feed to hogs.

The people who inhabit the most fashionable streets, those who know the danger of unsanitary conditions on their premises, do not keep hogs now. The people who live in the mill district and the colored settlements are the very ones who are affected by the keeping of hogs. This is the class of people the Civic League desires to help—those who have not fully realized the great menace the pig pens may prove in creating the dangerous typhoid fly, and thus producing sickness.

The people who would therefore be exempted by a law restricting the territory would be the ones who need no protection. But, gentlemen, if the hog is a menace to the people of Main and Lindsey and other fashionable streets, isn't the hog also a menace to the less prosperous people? If it is desired that you give protection to the well-to-do element of the city in banishing the hog from their midst, would it not be showing partiality if you decline to banish him from the midst of the less prosperous people?

Men who observe the cost of producing a hog have long ago determined that there was no profit in the town-raised hog. They have applied the same business judgment to the hog as they have applied to other matters which have helped to make them prosperous. They have learned, by reading and studying, that the hog on their premises is a menace to the health of their families and many of them have years ago quit keeping hogs. There are but few exceptions to this rule as applied to people on the principal residence streets.

It is the less prosperous citizen on the smaller streets and in the settlements of the less well-to-do classes for whose benefit new legislation is needed. These people who have not had an opportunity of learning the dangers a hog on their premises create are the ones for whose benefit the legislation is desired.

Reidsville is a well developed city. It has spent much money in the beautifying of its streets, in providing sanitary conditions, in improving the health of the community. There is not a city of like size and importance in the State that has voted bonds to its limit for the purpose of improving conditions, or which has a citizenship more progressive in this respect than Reidsville. And there is not a city in the State of like size and importance and with similar conditions that will permit the keeping of hogs in its corporate limits. Hog-raising in the cities of the country is a thing of the past and has given way under the great educational propaganda which has enabled the people to realize the dangers a hog creates.

If a stringent law relating to hog pens is adopted what will be the result? Hundreds of people will be violating the law by trying to keep a hog. There is no such thing as a sanitary hog pen, and no man can make a hog pen sanitary provided he keeps a hog therein. True, as Dr. Jett said, restrictions can be required that would greatly reduce the nuisance, but it is impossible to make a hog pen sanitary, and every well-posted man knows it. To make laws with this end in view is simply to lay down the bars for wholesale indictments against citizens who would not otherwise be regarded as violators of laws.

If the pen is raised from the ground and is permitted to slant towards the South there will be an accumulation of disease breeding debris underneath the pen that the sun never sheds its rays upon to create disease and death.

The responsibility for the health of the city of Reidsville rests upon our commissioners to a very great extent. This responsibility does not cease when the better class of people are protected. The citizen living in the side streets and in the settlements is just as much involved in this matter as any other citizen. His lack of information on the matter makes the commissioners' responsibility still greater, for it is the plain duty of the commissioners, when it is manifestly necessary, to provide laws for the preservation of life and health.

Gentlemen, you have been asked to abate the hog pen nuisance in Reidsville. We believe 90 per cent of the citizenship of the city want it abated. If you are satisfied, as a result of your information and education concerning the need of proper sanitary conditions that the hog pen is a menace to the health of the people on any street in Reidsville, then you are also satisfied that it is a menace to any other town man who can not keep a hog at a sufficient distance away from his home or his neighbor's home.

If you are trying to be fair to every citizen in the community, gentlemen, treat them all alike. Either prohibit the keeping of hogs anywhere in Reidsville or let every one who wants to keep one have this privilege. In other words, let's get rid of hogs or leave the matter as it stands.

If the announcement is made now that no hogs will be permitted in Reidsville after the first of the year this would end the nuisance and there would probably be not a single violation of this law.

REV. W. A. LAMBETH ON SEX EDUCATION

During one of his sermons recently, the Rev. W. A. Lambeth, pastor of Main Street M. E. church, took occasion to touch on sex immorality, and laid much of the blame on parents in their failure to have a heart-to-heart talk on this subject with the child. He declared that physicians here had informed him that 60 per cent of the young men walking the streets of Reidsville are or had been afflicted with some loathsome disease. Physicians say that 75 per cent of the young men in some of our large cities are thus diseased; and will carry the curse all through their own lives, involving others also, and, then, often leaving the blight as a cruel heritage to their offspring. A great doctor in New York has published an article on infant mortality, and lays the blame for a large part of the numerous deaths of babies from many apparent and immediate causes to the "Great Black Plague." In other ways, homes are invaded with the curse, and much suffering and sadness entailed.

We are glad that the Rev. Mr. Lambeth spoke plainly about this evil, and it is to be hoped that the people will soon recognize that it is an evil which must be combated. The moral effects of immorality every right thinking person knows, but the sin is so covered by an instinctive desire to hide it that it is generally hard to deal with. But here is a physical state of affairs that medical men say is real and can not be hidden; and they appeal to the people to be rid of the terrible social disease. There is but one way to do this, and that is for parents to make a study of the subject and see that their children are informed as to their sex nature. There are numerous books which will enable them to approach the subject by degrees suited to the child's age. It does no violence to a child's modesty to know things it has a right to know about the sacred functions of the human body and the proper safeguarding of his moral strength.

Mr. Lambeth is right in bringing the subject to the attention of the people, and the people will do something for the protection of the coming generation when they realize the enormity of the moral, spiritual and physical effects of the evident wide-spread loose conception of the value of personal purity. It is stated by those who have the means of knowing the facts that a great majority of the young men arriving at the age of citizenship in the United States are contaminated, not only by impurity of life, but also by some form of the "Great Black Plague." Many of the married life necessarily follow. And, if we accept the published reports of vice commissions of various cities of the country as giving even an exaggerated account of conditions existing in smaller cities and towns, the lives of a large number of girls exhibit a distressingly low conception of morality. The relief can come, not from giving much attention to those already contaminated, but from the proper sex education of children and growing boys and girls. Social offenses are due to ignorance, almost entirely.

Life. The poet's exclamation: "O, Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abundant. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.
