GOOD MARKETS FOR FARM PRODUCTS

If the present aggressive campaign for a largely increased acreage and production of food and feedstuffs in North Carolina is to have the permanent success it deserves and that is demanded by the exigencies of the situation the farmers of the State must have adequate markets for corn, small grain, beans, hay and hogs—markets that are on a par with cotton markets. The burden and responsibility of providing these markets is upon the shoulders of the business men of the cities and towns of the State. This is a part of their "bit" in the campaign which is intended to make the South feed itself. These are the conclusions of members of the North Carolina Food Conservation Commission and other experts and leaders who have carefully analyzed the situation in its many phases.

Acting upon these conclusions, Executive Secretary John Paul Lucas of the Commission has written to the boards of trade, chambers of commerce, merchants' associations and other commercial bodies in the State urging them to give consideration to the matter of proper markets in their respective localities without delay. The situation in North Carolina with regard to markets is described and the importance of these markets stressed by Mr. Lucas, who in the course of his letter says:

"North Carolina is woefully lacking in the matter of established markets for corn, small grains, hay, peas, beans, etc. The absence of these markets has held back to a greater extent than most of us realize the movement for diversified farming and the producing at home of all these products that we consume. We can't expect farmers to produce crops they cannot sell readily and at such a price as the buyer would have to pay for the product imported from the West. It is a notorious fact that in the vast majority of cities and towns in this State the merchants have been prone to take advantage to the utmost of the absence of these markets, refusing to pay anything like a fair price for products and thus, unintentionally, holding back the agricultural progress and prosperity of their county and State. This is shortsighted policy. If our merchants will offer the farmer a just and equitable price for his corn, small grain, hay, and other crops we shall see wonderful development of our agricultural industry and increased prosperity not only for our rural districts but for our cities and towns as well, for it is more and more clearly demonstrated that even our largest cities are largely dependent upon their prosperity and development upon the farming districts.

"This matter of markets demands careful and mature consideration. For best results, the merchant purchasing the products in question should have facilities for shelling corn, grading corn, wheat oats, and other small grain and for the proper handling of other products. With a large warehouse, bonded in proper form, the financing of a huge amount of products becomes a comparatively easy matter as the National Banks loan on warehouse certificate for any staple products.

"Our merchants should be willing to give to the home farmer the same price for corn or any other products delivered at his warehouse that he is compelled to pay for the same grade of the Western products. And this year, he is not going to be able to get much of the Western products. The farmer should find it just as easy to get a fair and staple price for his corn, small grain, hay, etc., as he does for his cotton or tobacco, and our State is not going to prosper as it should until he does.

"It is none too early to begin upon the marketing proposition and I am sending you this reminder so that you will have ample time to see that your city and community is not without a proper market when it is needed. I will appreciate it if you will keep this office informed as to any plans you may formulate and any progress you make along this line. Any service which we may be able to render will be offered gladly."

Winter Vegetables.

For the preservation of good health, as well as for affording variety to our food, winter vegetables should be started now. In the South there is no reason why fresh vegetables should not be available all the year round. If our friends here knew how hard they try North, East and West, to produce a few heads of lettuce, or a few radishes, under hot frames through the winter, it would stimulate the growing of winter vegetables. The people in other sections know well the value of variety in food the year round, and they try hard to obtain it. This lack of variety is one thing that saps our vitality, and leaves us about fifty per cent effective with the coming of spring. Let us make our plans now to have an abundance of winter vegetables, and we will be surprised at our vitality as a result.

The children on the farm can look after this, and it will give them a greater love of country life. Children love to see things growing, and to feel that they are helping to make them grow. Give the little ones a chance.

Three winter vegetables can be planted now for transplanting later on: Collards, carrots and salsify. Indeed four might be put in, adding spinach, but this can be planted later. However, the three we mention can be brought to perfection with a small amount of care.

Collards are something like cabbage, and take about the same cultivation. They are delicious after frost—in fact they are not much good until frost has struck them, but then they are delicious. They do not need like cabbage, and will stand more hot weather.

Collard seed can be planted up to the middle of June. Sow in beds just as you would cabbage seed, and transplant into the garden in July, or early in August. Plant in fertile ground, using fertilizer calculated to produce foliage. Plant in rows four feet apart, and the plants three feet apart. Collards can be planted in wheat stubble. It is fine food for the table, and is splendid for poultry, cows and hogs, and is greedily bought in the local markets.

Carrots are not well known South. If you want to see what it does on animals, give a feed now and then to your horse, and watch the change in his coat. It is a splendid vegetable, and almost indispensable in soup.

Sow the seed the latter part of June in a comparatively rich soil, and in rows about two feet apart, just as beets are sown. Plant a few radishes at the same time, and the radishes will come to maturity before your carrot seed germinates, and as you pull the radishes, it leaves room for the carrot. Thin out the carrots until they are about three inches apart. It is a hardy vegetable and may be left

S. S. HARRIS

In the ground all winter, and pulled when required.

Salsify, or oyster plant, is a delicious vegetable, and we should have a few rows of it. It makes delicious soup. Sow the same way as for carrots or beets, but not in too rich soil. It is hardy, and can be allowed to remain in the ground all winter, and pulled as needed.

We do not know how most people feel on the subject of fresh vegetables but we never crave them half as much as when they are hard to get, or the price puts them beyond our pocket book. And that is the time when our system needs them the most.

THE LIBERTY LOAN

Liberty's our invention
And the chief stock of our merchandise;
And we have a firm intention
To share with all this pearl we prize,
But we have a firm intention
To keep it for our own—
And the means, I needn't mention,
Is the Liberty loan.

It's the finest thing in the world
To go and fight with a gun,
Where the Stars and stripes unfurled
Are shimmering in the sun.
But it's also mighty fine
To spike the guns of Krupp,
When you cannot go and fight in the line,
By staying and giving up.

Give up your dimes and dollars
And what they represent,
Your pearl and diamond collars,
Your stocks at ten per cent.
Give up your touring car and yacht,
Because it's only right
That we give up a jolly lot
To help our boys to fight.

And if you're not so very rich
Just give the most you can—
Some luxury, no matter which,
The summer trip you plan,
Your summer suit, your cigarettes,
Your evening at a dance,
It all will help to pay our debts
And get our boys to France.

Loan a dollar to liberty
When others offer their lives,
They're going to fight to keep you free,
Their mothers and their wives,
Their little children offer them—
And all they ask of you
Is a sacrifice of dollars and dollars
To see our country through.

Sour Stomach

This is a mild form of indigestion. It is usually brought on by eating too rapidly or too much, or food not suited to your digestive organs. If you will eat slowly, masticate your food thoroughly, eat but little meat and none at all for supper, you will more than likely avoid the sour stomach without taking any medicine whatever. When you have sour stomach take one of Chamberlain's Tablets to aid indigestion.
