EDITOR JOE REECE DEAD

Greensboro, N. C., Aug. 24.—Joseph Martin Reece, editor of the Greensboro Daily Record, died this morning at 10:30 o'clock, after an illness of two months, during which time his family and friends knew that it was only a question of time until the end would come. While the announcement was not a surprise, news of his death was everywhere received as a shock to people of the city. Arterio sclerosis was the cause of his death, and during his two months illness he was unconscious nearly all the time. Saturday he began sinking and this morning the end came peacefully.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock from the First Presbyterian church, of which he had long been a member. Rev. Melton Clark, the pastor, will conduct the service. Deacons of the church will be pall bearers. During his illness he had requested that friends be asked not to send flowers, and have given directions for a simple funeral. Mr. Reece is survived by his widow, who was before marriage Miss Alice McCurray. No children were born to the couple, but they reared as their own three children of Mrs. Reece's sister, whom they loved as if their own children and upon whom they bestowed every parental affection. These are Mrs. Frank P. Morton, of Charlotte; Mrs. J. A. Williams, of Greensboro, and Mr. Charles H. Robertson, of Peoria, Ill.

At Jamestown, a village of this county, on June 11, 1848, Mr. Reece was born. All of his 67 years and a little more were spent in this county. His father, William H. Reece, was for several years station agent at Jamestown. When Mr. Reece was still a youth his father came to Greensboro and purchased the property on which the Record office now stands and which is still in the family. This property was then occupied by a hotel which Mr. Reece's father conducted.

Early in life Mr. Reece entered a newspaper plant. Having obtained a taste of printer's ink he never left the work. He worked first in the mechanical department of the Greensboro Patriot, on other papers and was in the job business with Messrs. C. P. Thomas and H. J. Elam, at different times.

On November 17, 1890, Messrs. Reece and Elam founded the Daily Record, an afternoon paper, which has been regularly issued ever since. At first it was not a financial success, but in a few years it was well established, and is now a valuable piece of property. Its two-story building occupies a site on West Market street, where the old hotel of Mr. Reece's father stood. In 1902 Mr. Elam sold his interest in the business to Mr. and Mrs. Reece, but Mr. Elam is still connected with the paper as advertising manager.

Mr. Reece was not a brilliant editor, but it is doubtful if the editorials of any man in the state were more generally read. He had a rare sense of humor, an easy and plain style of writing that had a charm of its own, and a vast amount of common sense that ever gave him poise. He was a good judge of men and measures, had intuition that appalled people who tried to mislead him and always spoke and wrote plainly what he thought. Some of his colloquial and inimitable expressions that have so long been seen in The Record will be missed.

He was ever a staunch democrat and believed in the principles of his party. Yet he never hesitated to condemn the demagogue, the weakling or the grafter, no matter his party. He never cared for office of any sort of preferment and refused anything of the kind offered him.

Baseball was his recreation. He rarely missed a game in the city, and he rarely left the city to see a game or for any other purpose. He was a charter member of "Tammaay," the circle of Greensboro's older men that met about the courthouse steps in summer and in County Treasurer McKinney's office in winter. This was his only club and lodge. This unique body has no organization, yet its members are well known. They will attend the funeral in a body.

Said to be 115 Years Old.

On the top floor of an old brick building at Fulton street and Casson avenue, Brooklyn, sat the oldest living person in New York state yesterday, contentedly munching bread and stewed pears at the age of 115. She is Susan Gillis, who was a slave for sixty-three years before the emancipation proclamation. That is, great-grandchildren say they know she is 115 years old, although she may be a few years older.

Her daughter, Julia Thomas, who is now eighty-four, and was also a slave with her mother, was in the same room, peeling potatoes and regarding the inquisitive reporter with a none too favorable eye. It was plain that she did not fancy this sudden leap into publicity. But Susan, whose conversation is limited because of her age, gave a throaty little chuckle at "the fourth one today," and kept on eating her pears.

The long lived family came into notice through the recent census, for yesterday the state census bureau at Albany sent out a special story about them. The bald statement that Susan was 115, "no occupation," was not a fitting description of the picturesque old woman who was getting old during the Petersburg campaign of the civil war.—New York Sun.

T. A. Walker, of Greensboro was a business visitor in this city yesterday.

Whitleather Stockings Are Good Wearers

6 Pairs Guaranteed 4 Months. Priced 10c & 15c Pair
