MAKERS OF HARD CIDER IN MOONSHINERS' CLASS

McLellan Law Takes From Kentucky Farmers Their Most-esteemed Beverage.

MAKES STATE "BONE DRY"

Louisville, Ky., April 21.—Farmers in Kentucky, who have been accustomed to quenching their thirst with hard cider may be classed as "moonshiners" under the McLellan law which goes into effect on June 1. Under the state-wide dry amendment adopted by the people last fall, any person having a beverage containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol, except the cider or homemade wine on their premises, may be held in court to show whether their manipulation of it with or without a barrel.

Kentucky is thus assuming "sovereign jurisdiction" with the government of the United States in enforcing state干禁令. The state enforcement act and state dry laws are now in effect in the state, so nothing has changed the situation with some drys.

Thirty-four other states and the District of Columbia have now law or permanent measures on their books. Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin have all adopted a complete or partial dry law, while another state has just passed by the popular referendum.

The states which as far back as passed such enforcement laws are Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Kansas, and Wisconsin. Those of the 16, since April 1, have adopted laws which have been adopted since July. The 16 remaining states are in the process of doing the same, and as far as can be predicted that the United States Senate, after adjourning last Friday, will pass a bill to prohibit all new and existing state laws from being passed by the popular referendum.
